Cries of Entombed Pair Spur Mine Rescue Crew In Race to Thwart Death

Underground 8 Days, 2 Survivors Hysterical; Water Is Rising.

Doctor Says They Can Live 24 Hours

Survivors Underground Too Weak to Reach Food Passage.

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Moose River, Nova Scotia (Tuesday), April 21.—Rescue workers hacked desperately early today at a wall of rock separating them from two men entombed for eight days in the Moose River Gold Mine, after H. K. MacDonald, Halifax physician, said the pair could live another 24 hours.

Too weak to walk for nourishment which was offered them down a tube, the imprisoned pair—Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding—expressed the fear the tunnelers would "overshoot their mark."

In a voice that sounded hysterical, Dr. Robertson said over the telephone line which had been lowered to them in the pit where they huddled with the dead body of Herman Magill:

"We can't hear them drilling now. We could hear them drilling in the shaft before."

Wants Much Noise.

Rescue workers promised late last night they would have the two men out by morning. But earlier, at 9 p. m., they had been told "We'll reach you in a few minutes."

Robertson promised "I won't lose my head." But he asked that the engineer in charge of underground operations make as much noise as possible so he would know the workers were near.

The rescue crew had no plan of the gold mine, and could not tell the exact spot where Robertson and Scadding—cold, hungry and sickened—crouched above a rising level of water. They knew only that it was at the 141-foot level. At midnight, engineers estimated the underground diggers were from 20 to 30 feet away from the pair.

Physicians on the surface expressed the opinion Robertson and Scadding were suffering from hallucinations, after their long entombment.

Was Shouting Wildly.

Scadding was shouting wildly in his conversations with men stationed at the surface end of the communication line, and he talked often, wasting his strength.

An appeal went out early today for six unmarried volunteers to replace exhausted diggers who had been tunneling with little rest for 24 hours, since Magill's death was made known.

R. J. Ivey, brother-in-law of Dr. Robertson, talked over the wire to his relative.

"He thinks we are lying to them," he quietly told the crowd. "They think the men are so far away they will be 10 or 12 hours cutting through."

There was no mention from either end of the line of Herman R. Magill, Toronto lawyer and co-owner of the shaft with Robertson, who died of hunger and exhaustion earlier today.

Airplane Brings Wool.

An airplane of the Ontario government landed on a lake 5 miles away carrying long strips of wool to be passed down the drilled hole for warmth of the two men.

Michael Dwyer, minister of mines, returned to the surface and said he "had never seen anything to equal the courage of the Nova Scotia miners," waiting tensely for a chance to go down the makeshift shaft.

Eleven Stellarton dynegermen, trained to enter coal mines after explosions, led the rescuers, assisted by 11 men from Moose River, Caribou, Goldenville and Waverly.

When You Lose Anything, Don't Lose Time! Phone National 4200

Finders are not keepers. When you lose anything, you must act quickly if you want to recover your loss. It's only logical that when you lose anything in the evening, you should immediately place a small "lost" ad in The Post, which reaches 98,021 familes EVERY MORNING. A small fox-hound was lost in Chevy Chase last week. This Post Ad was inserted the following morning:

Senators Relax, Tossing Insults Back and Forth Over New Deal

Hastings and Robinson Indulge in Personalities After Former Launches Attack on Democrats, Defends Liberty Leaguers.

By Felix Bruner.

Released from two weeks of the dignity of an impeachment trial, the Senate broke loose yesterday in a merry political battle, during which insults were freely tossed back and forth across the aisle separating the Republican minority and the Democratic majority.

With the surge of spring in their veins, and with an appreciative audience in the galleries, senatorial party leaders strove mightily to achieve what is sometimes known as biting humor, and incidentally to fulfill the prophecy of James A. Farley that this would be a dirty campaign.

It started seriously enough with an hour-long prepared speech by Senator Hastings (Republican), Delaware. Hastings defended the Liberty League, the du Pont family, John J. Raskob, John W. Davis and others who he inferred were the only real Democrats. He hurled in the teeth of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader, many of the pleasant words uttered by the Senator about Alfred E. Smith when he was Smith's running mate in 1928.

Assails New Deal.

Hastings attacked the New Deal, especially the administration of relief. Once he broke into "poetry," to wit:

"Not a citizen shall shiver
Or go hungry in this section
(If we're certain they'll deliver
"In the '36 election.)

"We relieve the starved and frozen
With no hesitance or parley,
"(If the politics they've chosen
Are approved by Mr. Farley!)"

Hastings, before beginning to read his speech, asked that he not be interrupted by questions. As he demanded to know what objection there could be to an honest investigation of relief, and as he declared that the Liberty League principles resemble more nearly the Democratic platform than do the activities of the New Deal, Senator Robinson plainly showed signs of champing at the bit. Finally he could resist no longer.

Declines to Yield.

"Will the Senator yield?" asked Robinson.

"No!" shouted Hastings.

He read on, explaining that Irenee du Pont contributed to the 1932 campaign, that President Roosevelt had highly praised Al Smith when he placed him in nomination for the Presidency in 1924, and that Robinson himself had said nice things about Smith. He quoted some of the things the President and Robinson had said.

"Who is it," he asked, "that has repudiated the principles of Jefferson, the principles of the Democratic Party? Is it these Democratic members of the Liberty League or the New Dealers?"

"Will the Senator yield?" asked Robinson.

"No!" shouted Hastings.

Robinson sat down, mumbling that the Senator asked questions and then wouldn't let anybody answer them.

Hastings advised the Democrats on their 1936 platform.

"The only thing you can do in order to be consistent in your 1936 platform is to make no specific promises other than to say that the New Deal Congress will do what President Roosevelt wants it to do, and that the President will decide from day to day what he wants done," he said.

As Hastings concluded, Robinson was on his feet.

"The Senator from Delaware quotes what I said about Gov. Smith

U. S. Bureaus Accused of Aid In Arms Racket

Senate Munitions Group Charges Unethical Sales Abroad Condoned.

Charges that the War, Navy and Commerce Departments support and condone unethical practices of munitions manufactures in making sales abroad were made yesterday by the Senate Munitions Committee. The committee found that representatives of arms manufacturers had resorted to bribery, discouragement of disarmament attempts, and to stirring up international trouble.

The committee, by a 4-to-3 vote, recommended that the Government take over the manufacture of principal armaments and munitions of war. The minority held that nationalization of armament manufacturing might lead to pressure to keep Government factories operating at top speed in peace time to be prepared for war, and that it would discourage supplemental co-operation from private manufacturers in case of war.

Voting for nationalization of armments were Senators Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman; Clark (Democrat), Missouri; Pope (Democrat), Idaho, and Bone (Democrat, Washington. Against nationalization were Senators George (Democrat), Georgia; Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, and Barbour (Republican), New Jersey.

The committee was unanimous in

Bloc in House Plans to Bolt On WPA Aid

Beiter Leader in Move to Give PWA Half of $1,300,000,000

Ickes Aloof From Fight, But Is Reputed to Be in Favor of Step.

A decision to canvass every member of the House in a neffort to divert nearly half of the $1,500,000,000 relief fund into PWA projects of permanent value, was reached yesterdway by a bolting bloc of House Democrats, which will map plans for its fight at a conference today.

The earmarking bloc, which claims that a majority of the House is behind the movement, planned to lay petitions before President Roosevelt today, but due to his absence from the city, will delay their White House show-down until next week.

"It will give us more time to canvass support," said Representative Alfred F. Beiter (Democrat), of New York, leader of the group.

Beiter will meet with his committee of 21 in the Speaker's dining room and hear reports on 17 petitions still in circulation. A handful of petitions already turned in have 67 signatures.

Although Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes is keeping aloof from the fight, it was said in one quarter that he is more than willing to go forward with a $700,000,000 PWA program of the type sought by the Beiter bloc.

Ickes does not share in the $1,500,000,000 relief bill now before the House Appropriations Committee, but many believe he would like to. Estimates submitted by the Budget Bureau would make all the money available to Harry L. Hopkins' WPA administration. In addition, Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's Resettlement Administration is seeking $100,000,000 to $200,000,000 of the fund.

Beiter said he is reliably informed that the PWA could put the $700,000,000 to work within two weeks on projects already approved, and part of the cost of which would be defrayed by local communities. Many of the projects could be completed in a year, he said.

His strategy will be to call a House Democratic caucus if the President opposes the PWA earmarking, and attempt to bind Democrats in favor of the PWA allocation.

There was every sign of a merry war, crossing party lines, once the relief bill reaches the House floor. WPA, which will receive the bulk of the funds, meanwhile was the center of an interesting court battle.

Justice Peyton Gordon, in the District Supreme Court, late yesterday took under advisement a request by Benjamin J. Spang, Philadelphia World War veteran, that all activities of the Works Progress Administration be halted until former service men had been given preference in obtaining jobs.

Copy of Ruling Offered.

Spang, who obtained an injunction in Philadelphia, introduced a copy of a ruling by Justice George Welch, of the Quaker City, holding that war veterans were clearly entitled to preference. The Government is appealing from that decision, and Justice Gordon intimated he might withhold his opinion until the Circuit Court of Appeals rules.

Spang's petition, filed here several weeks ago, would result in probable wholesale dismissal of WPA workers until all former service men were employed. The Government, represented by Charles E. Ryzanski, a special assistant to the Attorney General, asked dismissal of his suit on the theory he did not have sufficient interest in the matter as a mere former service man.

The Government also contended there was no specific Congressional intent that war veterans should be given preference over others and also that the suit, in effect, an action against the Government to which it had not given its consent.

Negotiations looking to the revival of a "modified" plan for harnessing the tides at Passamaquoddy, Me., meanwhile went forward, despite the President's recent announcement that present plans had been virtually abandoned, due to refusal of Congress to appropriate further funds.

The entire Maine House delegation, and Maine's two Republican Senators, conferred with Roosevelt

Ban on U.S. Employes as Jurors Placed Before Supreme Court

The question of whether 100,000 Government employes and pensioners shall be eligible to serve on District of Columbia juries considering criminal cases was placed before the Supreme Court of the United States yesterday.

Stanley Reed, Solicitor General, asked the court for a writ of certiorari in the hope that it would lead to a review and a reversal of the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia in the case of Raymond Wood versus United States.

In that judgment, the Court of Appeals held that the act of August 22, 1935, by which Congress authorized Government employes and pensioners to serve as jurors, was unconstitutional.

The case of Wood is relatively unimportant. He was merely accused of stealing two dresses worth $17.50. But the issue involved—whether persons here receiving remuneration from the Government are to be barred as jurors—is regarded as of tremendous importance.

Congress enacted the law of August 22, 1935, because Government workers and pensioners constitute almost one-half of the total number of qualified jurors in the city and because it had been "exceedingly difficult to obtain the best personnel on juries in the District."

The prisoner, Wood, was tried in Police Court, which, in this Capital City, is a United States tribunal. His attorney used the three peremptory challenges to eliminate three prospective jurors who were receiving money from the United States Government.

However, the jury as finally impaneled included a Treasury Department clerk, a Navy Yard clerk and a woman receiving a Civil War pension.

The jury found Wood guilty and he was sentenced to 240 days in jail. His attorney asked for a new trial on the ground that the jury

Message Sent D. A. R. Rally By President

He Calls America's Army and Navy Defenses Adequate.

America's military and naval establishments are adequate for the national defense and there will be no increase in armaments unless other nations increase theirs, President Roosevelt declared last night in a message read at the opening session of the forty-fifth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The message was read by Mrs. William A. Becker, president-general of the organization, to the more than 5,000 D. A. R. members assembled in flag-draped Constitution Hall in an atmosphere of military pomp and martial display reminiscent of a patriotic war-time rally.

Following the reading of the message Mrs. Becker sounded the keynote of the Congress—the preservation of American ideals in the youth of the land against the subversive onslaughts of communism. Both Mrs. Becker's speech and the President's message were broadcast over national networks.

The President had originally planned to address the Congress in person. Because of the death of Louis McHenry Howe he sent the message instead.

Called 'Totally Wrong.'

Contentions, on the one hand, that the national defense was inferior and inadequate, and on the other, that it is "much too large for our needs, an unnecessary expense and a threat to peace," both were dismissed by the President in his message as "totally wrong" conclusions.

"It has been the aim of this Administration to make our national defense efficient and to keep it adequate," wrote the President. "Today our defense forces are on a stronger peacetime basis than before. It is our purpose to keep them that way.

"When we say adequate defense we mean just that. The prospect of a war of aggression has no place in our American policy. It has no place in our military or naval program. We are maintaining a system that will meet our defensive needs. We have no other plan for any other kind of a system."

America's traditional foreign policy of pressing for armament limitations and of standing "firmly by our solemn treaty obligations renouncing war as an instrument of national policy" were reiterated by the President.

New Era of Good Will.

"We have stated the principles of the good neighbor as the standard for the conduct of our foreign policy," continued the President. "Already that practice has ushered in a new era of good will between ourselves and the great nations of the Americas."

As the President's message was read, seated on the flag-decked, fern-lined platform was a distinguished group of Army and Navy officers, Senators and foreign diplomats, including the Ambassadors from Mexico, El Salvador and Nicaragua, three of the Latin-American countries which will send representatives to the Pan-American conference mentioned in the President's message.

Urging the D. A. R. to dedicate themselves "to the training of our youth that America's dream may come true," Mrs. Becker pointed to the danger that the recent years of unemployment were generating another "lost generation" similar to that lost generation whose "ideals were shattered and youth was lost" in the war.

"In the year 1930 America had 6,000,000 young people between the ages of 14 and 24 who were out of school and with no work," she pointed out. "The number is larger today. Between the ages of 18 and 20 alone 3,000,000 are unable to

Two Slayers, 19, Given 199 Years

Chicago, April 20 (AP).—Sentences of 199 years each, designed, Judge Joseph Burke said, to keep them in the penitentiary the rest of their lives, were imposed today on two of the four 'teen age gangsters indicted for murdering Dr. Silber C. Peacock, child specialist, last January 2.

The pair—Durland Nash, 19, and Robert Goethe, 19—pleaded guilty to the murder charge and Goethe testified he shot the physician, who was enticed from his home on the pretext of a "mercy call."

Both also were given terms of one year to life in prison on their pleas of guilty to four charges of robbery. They will serve these at the expiration of their terms on the murder charge.

The sudden determination of the State's attorney's office to place the two on trial came as a surprise as they were scheduled to be arraigned May 4 with their alleged companions, Emil Reck, 19, and Michael Livingston, 17. Both Reck and Livingston have repudiated confessions prosecutors said all four made soon after their arrests and have entered pleas of innocence to the Peacock charge.

Citizens Flee as Addis Ababa Plans for Desperate Defense

City in Wild Confusion as Italians Approach; Nasibu to Fight.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Addis Ababa, April 20.—Emperor Haile Selassie's capital, sprawling under groves of eucalyptus trees, was a scene of wild confusion tonight with Italian flying columns reported moving swiftly toward occupation of the city.

Convinced that arrival of the conquerors is imminent, the population, dazed and panic-stricken, abandoned all the pursuits of ordinary life.

Motor trucks laden with military supplies roared through the streets. Thousands of all nationalities besieged the fortified British legation begging for protection.

Military lorries streamed into the capital from the northern front, while the imperial highway from Dessye was black with fleeing fugitives.

Army commanders worked feverishly on belated, last-minute preparations to block the Italian advance if possible. Stores of gun cotton were rushed to the Dessye road after announcement of plans to blow up bridges and send rain-swollen torrents cascading across mountain paths and caravan trails.

Reports continued to circulate that Crown Prince Asfar Wosan was en route to Italian headquarters in Dessye to negotiate peace.

Information as to the whereabouts of the invading forces was confused, but the arrival of refugees from occupied territory in the north spread

Legation Raid, Dry Era Killing Linked to Ash

Suspect Held in New York in Bank Theft Faces 2 Other Charges.

Charles (Doc) Ash, 42, arrested early Sunday in a Greenwich Village opium den in New York in connection with the $25,000 holdup of the Woodridge-Langdon Savings Bank in 1932 was accused yesterday of committing two more major crimes in Washington back in the days of prohibition.

Police here said Ash was one of the men who broke into the Legation of San Salvador, then at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street northwest, carted away 17 cases of choice liquor and shot at and slugged Dr. Don Carlos Leiva, counselor and charge d'affaires, when he tried to frustrate the robbery.

Police also said Ash was wanted for the murder of Jack Cunningham, a well-known bootlegger and "stoolpigeon" in the prohibition era.

The two crimes, police always have believed, were related.

The San Salvadorean Legation was robbed at 2 o'clock of the morning of May 12, 1931.

Cunningham was shot and killed as he was entering his home in the 1400 block of I street one week later.

Shortly after the murder a .45 caliber revolver was found on Lincoln road, not far from where Ash was living.

Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert of the Detective Bureau, conducted experiments with the revolver and afterwards announced it was the weapon which had been fired twice at Dr. Leiva in the Legation and which had fatally wounded Cunningham.

Cunningham had just returned from the First Precinct Station, where, it was presumed, he gave information concerning the legation robbery. His murder, police concluded, was the usual underworld reprisal for "squealing."

"Doc" Ash meantime had disappeared.

However, two crimes committed the following year are now blamed on him.

Police said yesterday that he was

Cousin Details Slaying of Girl In Capital Hotel

Annie O'Bannon Testifies as Culpeper Man's Trial Opens.

The tragic story of a middle-aged man's jealousy for the young girl he professed to love was related in Justice Oscar Luhring's Criminal Court yesterday afternoon by Miss Annie O'Bannon, the Government's principal witness in the first-degree murder trial of William H. Reaguer, 57-year-old Culpeper, Va., undertaker, charged with slaying Mrs. Willie Mae Wood, bride of 17 days, in the Houston Hotel before dawn last October 12.

It was a "November and April" romance of five years standing that led to the killing, the court was told. When Willie Mae Fletcher married Herbert Wood, handsome Virginia State highway commission employe, Reaguer's jealousy became uncontrollable, it was testified.

As Miss O'Bannon, pretty blonde 18-year-old cousin of the dead girl, described the scenes leading to the fatal trip she and Willie Mae took to Washington with the undertaker last autumn, the broad-shouldered defendant buried his face in his hands and sobbed.

Avoids Eyes of Witness.

Reaguer, who is alleged to have almost decapitated his victim with a pocket knife as she lay beside him in his room on the ninth floor of the hotel, avoided the eyes of the witness and of the court.

Except for his one outburst of emotion, he kept his eyes fixed toward the courtroom door and the crowds that stood in line outside, waiting for seats. He is the father of two married daughters.

Miss O'Bannon, speaking in a steady, clear voice, testified Reaguer brought her and her cousin to Washington under the pretext of bringing Willie Mae from the home of her parents in Culpeper, to Fairfax Station, where she lived with her husband.

"He insisted that we come," Miss O'Bannon said.

"He said we had to come with him. Willie Mae drove and he sat between us. He had a shotgun with

Hitler Stages Huge Pageant Of War, Marks 47th Birthday

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, April 20.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, on his forty-seventh birthday, offered his loyal people a spectacular military display today such as Berlin has not seen since the days of the World War.

Der Fuehrer did not spare himself. The day began for him a few minutes after midnight when he showed himself in a focus of searchlights on the balcony of the chancellery in response to clamoring crowds below who invaded Berlin in droves, all anxious to be among the first to sign the birthday register.

In the parade Hitler stood in an automobile receiving homage of the multitude all the way to a point in the Tiergarten, where he saluted continually for about two hours during the duration of the march past him.

A novelty for Berlin burghers was the spectacle of hundreds of two-man tanks and armed motorcycles clattering past. The crowd was visibly thrilled by thoughts of the possibilities of the new weapons.

Meanwhile mail carriers were delivering birthday parcels to the chancellery in car loads.

Parades were also held in other garrison towns of the Reich and naval displays staged at Kiel and other ports.

From the Saar and the remilitarized section of the Rhineland came especially fervent greetings.

Hitler made no formal speech but in response to one by Gen. Von Blomberg lauding him, he said:

"I build my hopes for the future on two organizations which seem to me to have the sole factors guaranteeing their fulfillment—namely, the National Socialist Party, as the creative executive of the new political will, and the defensive forces, similarly the creative executive of the military power."

Hitler wore a brown uniform of the Storm Troopers as he and the army's highest officers watched the parade from a reviewing platform in the Tiergarten.

Eden Demands Action by Geneva, Insists Sanctions Stand.

England Ready For Intervention

Support of Rome Held Necessary in Face of Nazi 'War Threat.'

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Geneva, April 20.—The League of Nations Council tonight decided to address a supreme appeal to Italy to make peace with Ethiopia.

It hinted that Italy's support of the League is necessary to Europe because of the danger that Germany may plunge the continent into war.

Reports of the latest appeal for peace were met in Rome with fresh defiance, and it was indicated that the League's plea will meet with prompt rejection.

Earlier British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden had demanded the maintenance of existing sanctions against Italy. He declared his government's readiness to enforce new economic and financial sanctions and hinted that if the League fails to curb Italy, Britain is ready to take independent action.

Eden took the strongest position of his spectacular career after Ethiopia's delegate, Wolde Mariam, demanded enforcement of military sanctions against Italy under Article 16 of the League Covenant.

Earlier, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, Premier Benito Mussolini's envoy, revealed that Italy, before granting an armistice, would demand all of Ethiopia, including occupation of Addis Ababa.

Aloisi denied that Italy was responsible for failure of peace negotiations, claiming that Ethiopian intransigeance caused the breakdown.

Will Never Agree.

He indicated that Italy would never agree to an armistice before preliminary peace arrangements have been made.

The Council tonight was in virtual agreement to adopt a resolution appealing to Italy to make peace like a good League member "in view of present circumstances which require the collaboration of all nations."

Council members explained that the phrase constituted a hint that Italy's help is required against Germany.

The resolution would make Italy responsible for the failure of peace efforts. It would indicate that existing sanctions must remain effective and it declares that the international anti-gas convention must be respected.

Eden's declaration before the Council that if the Italo-Ethiopian conflict destroys the League's future utility each nation would have to reconsider its foreign policy was widely interpreted as a hint that Britain might leave the League.

In such event Britain, with other nations following policies similar to hers, might feel obliged to intervene directly to settle the East African war.

Council discussion showed that the temporary Franco-British diplomatic truce concluded Friday failed to overcome the fundamental differences between the two countries.

Eden insisted that the Italo-Ethiopian war be made a test case to determine the League's future. Joseph Paul-Boncour, French delegate, revealed that France still is primarily worried over Germany and wants European disagreement over the East African crisis to terminate as quickly as possible.

Surprise Move.

Eden's declaration that existing sanctions must be maintained and that Britain is ready to consider new economic and financial sanctions against Italy was a surprise development. It had been expected that the Council would sit merely to record its Committee of Thirteen's admission of failure to negotiate peace between Italy and Ethiopia.

Eden warned that failure to settle the war might portend grave consequences for the League.

If the East African war shakes the League "each member will have to consider the policy which, in such a situation, it would be our duty to pursue," he said.

The announcement followed the first time that the British have indicated officially that there is pos-

16-Hour Limit On Tax Debate Voted by House

Bill Comes Up Thursday; Senate Hearings Start Same Day.

By Robert C. Albright.

Uncertain of revenue, but carrying the most revolutionary change in tax law in the last two decades, the Administration's tax program yesterday was made the subject for posthaste consideration in both House and Senate to clear the route for relief appropriations and adjournment.

The House consented unanimously to call the bill up under a 16-hour debate agreement Thursday noon, and Chairman Pat Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, simultaneously ordered opening of Senate hearings on the House measure the same day.

Meanwhile, a hitherto undisclosed modification in the House draft of the bill was revealed to have sidetracked the Ways and Means Committee's prior intention to tax dividends paid out from corporate earnings and profits accumulated before March 1, 1913, the date of income tax enactment.

Series of Modifications.

Congress had exempted all such dividends from taxation, but the House group had decided to apply both normal and surtax rates, removing the exemption. Business witnesses strenuously opposed the provision at recent House hearings, and it was learned yesterday that the House sub-committee had decided to reverse its former action.

The change was one of a series of modifications made in the original report on the bill. Since the report was first drafted, the committee has provided modest relief for debt-laden corporations, cut down the "windfall" tax on processing tax refunds from 90 to 85 per cent, and scaled down rates on foreign corporations and individuals.

Changes made in the bill, coupled with disclosure that a "lag" may result the first year from delayed corporate dividend payments, gave rise to doubts that the bill would produce the $799,000,000 originally estimated.

Doubtful of Yield.

It was learned last night that the Treasury has been asked to make a completely new set of revenue estimates, covering the bill as now drafted, and submit them to the Ways and Means Committee, either for inclusion in the tax bill report or for use of the committee during floor consideration of the bill. Privately, committee members said they thought the estimates would be in the neighborhood of the original $799,000,000. Republicans challenge whether it would produce anything like that amount if, in fact, it would yield any additional revenue.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton has called a meeting of his full Ways and Means Committee for this morning to report out the revised draft of the measure. Yesterday Doughton asked and received House permission to file his report before midnight tonight, and to call it up for floor consideration on Thursday. At the same time, he received unanimous consent to limit debate to 16 hours. This eliminated necessity for bringing out the bill under a special House rule.

The Ways and Means minority, which intends to write a minority report denouncing the Administration's plan to impose graduated taxes on corporate earnings in proportion to dividends withheld from distribution, have been unable to obtain even a rough draft of the new bill.

Minority Report Due.

Representative Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), Michigan, yesterday asked Doughton when they would "have a look at it." Doughton promised to make it available. The minority, which plans to point out in the main that no tax bill would be necessary if the New Deal curtailed its spending, will review the bill this afternoon, and file a minority report along with the majority statement tonight.

Doughton was rebuffed yesterday as he first asked consent to call the bill up Thursday. Representative Robert F. Rich (Republican), Pennsylvania, objected. Rich had tried vainly to get an estimate of the bill's yield from the Ways and Means Committee chairman. Later, Doughton put his request to the House again, and it was not objected to.

Senate Hearings to Start.

Hardly had right-of-way for the measure been assured before Senator Harrison informed the Senate his finance committee would open tax hearings Thursday. Presumably he will use the House tax draft as a base. Harrison did not disclose names of witnesses who will appear. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, asked yesterday if he would testify, said he had not yet been invited. Morgenthau did not appear before the House committee, and it was thought improbable he would be a Senate witness.

During the course of Senate tax discussion, an effort will be made to displace the Administration's corporate tax proposals with a variation of the plan, using an increased corporate income tax as a base. The Administration, however, is said to be unalterably opposed to any such variation. It was attempted in the House committee, but voted down. The Administration, also is expected to ask revival of processing taxes, in modified form.

Effect of Louis Howe's Death on the Roosevelt Campaign Is Problem; Prosperity Issue.

By Franklyn Waltman

FOR the first time in 25 years President Roosevelt is entering a political campaign without Louis McHenry Howe at his side. Even had the President's secretary lived, his illness would have prevented him this year from playing the part which brought Franklin D. Roosevelt from the New York State Senate to the White House.

WALTMAN

How great a loss, from a political viewpoint, Mr. Howe's death will be to the President none knows. He was not only the President's "no" man, but he also was the President's eyes and ears. From 1912 until a year ago he kept his ear to the ground and his eye on the crowd to ascertain reaction to what Mr. Roosevelt was doing and saying.

In the 1932 Presidential campaign, for instance, it was Mr. Howe who watched the faces of audiences. Instinctively he could sense the crowd's reaction and far in advance of anyone else he knew whether Mr. Roosevelt had sold himself.

And having found the answer, he was not one to keep the truth away from Mr. Roosevelt if the reaction were unfavorable. Older than the President, Mr. Howe addressed him as "Franklin," and when "Louie," as the President called him, found it necessary to criticize, Mr. Roosevelt listened and was impressed.

Many other men in the Roosevelt entourage now and then have believed that the President was stepping off on the wrong foot—and several have tried to tell him so, but frequently without effect. Several times within the last year some of these men have wished that "Louie" Howe was around to "set the President right," as they expressed it.

Democratic leaders contend—and some observers agree with them—that so rosy are the President's prospects for re-election that he can make a few mistakes and still win. Otherwise, Mr. Howe's illness and death might be a major factor in this year's campaign. Maybe it is anyway, but of that none can be sure

Since the American people seem primarily interested in personalities rather than issues, there is a tendency to exaggerate and over-emphasize the part that individuals play in the winning of political campaigns. Much is said from time to time about the excellence of this strategist or the effectiveness of that publicity director.

But it frequently happens that circumstances, such as economic forces, have far more to do with the outcome of political contests than all the efforts of campaign managers, press agents and speech-makers. Does anyone believe that Herbert Hoover was defeated in 1932 because he lacked a good press agent or an able strategist? Of course not. Mr. Hoover's defeat was inevitable from the day the depression began.

And the upswing in business and returning prosperity are the best allies President Roosevelt has in this campaign. If the lines of the business graphs and charts were pointed downward—instead of sharply upward—there would be a good prospect of his defeat. In that event he would have to do the fighting. Now his foes have got to battle.

The prosperity issue is a difficult one to beat. It was Frank R. Kent, of the Baltimore Sun, we believe, who coined the political axiom: "Prosperity absorbs all other issues." But whoever the author, it has been a truism. It was true in 1924, when the voters cared more for prosperity than they did about the Teapot Dome scandals. It was true in 1928, when prosperity submerged prohibition as an issue—yet four years later, with prosperity gone, prohibition was summarily rejected. It was true in 1932, when the electorate turned out Herbert Hoover because prosperity was gone.

Until the present, prosperity has been an issue which the Democrats have not liked. It favored the Republicans, who, with their cries of the "full dinner pail," were able to retain control of the Federal Government for all but 20 of the last 75 years.

But now the tables have been turned. The Democrats claim the authorship of prosperity and they are using the old shibboleths which comprised Republican campaign propaganda for so many years. Here comes the Democratic Women's National Council, seeking to raise funds for the party war chest by selling "prosperity certificates."

And on the face of these certificates it is asserted:

"Continue Recovery—Re-elect Roosevelt."

"Don't change horses in the middle of the stream."

"History proves that all depressions originated in Republican administrations. Our country cannot afford to risk another."

The Republicans in 1928 were uttering virtually the same words, except that, of course, they contended depressions start in Democratic administrations.

Since the House refused to give Senator Hugo L. Black and his lobby investigating committee a vote of confidence by appropriating $10,000 for counsel for the committee to test the constitutionality of their dragnet seizure of telegrams, why doesn't the Alabaman take advantage of the American Liberty League's offer to supply eminent counsel without charge to "indigent persons" wishing to test constitutional questions? We are sure Jouett Shouse would be most accommodating.

Bloc Plans Bolt on WPA

at the White House. Earlier, Gov. Louis J. Brann, of Maine; Maj. Gen. Edward M. Markham, chief of Army Engineers, and Col. Philip Fleming, Army engineer in charge, had talked with the President.

Indications are that modified plans for continuance of work on both Passamaquoddy and the Florida Ship Canal, may be recommended. Gen. Markham said yesterday that money allocated by the President out of relief funds for the tide-harnessing project, probably will last through June.

New charges that relief appropriations are being used "for purely political purposes" were made yesterday by Senator Robert D. Carey (Republican), of Wyoming, in a statement released through the Republican National Committee.

"It would be most interesting to learn the amount of money appropriated for relief purposes which is being used exclusively for political purposes," Carey said. "This is information to which the American people are entitled, but which, I presume, will never be made known."

Carey charged relief funds have been allocated to the National Emergency Council, which, he declared, "is in fact nothing more than a Nation-wide political machine, operated to build support for President Roosevelt, and to break down opposition to the Administration."

One allotment of $2,870,000 was made by Hopkins to the council, according to Carey, who charged the NEC "is largely using its nest egg for the payment of more generous salaries to its administrative staff."

"While every effort is being made to make the NEC appear a coordinating agency," Carey said, "the fact is that its activities are confined to keeping track of political developments in the States and to reporting to headquarters in Washington both brickbats and bouquets affecting the New Deal."

Democrats Claim 'Prosperity' Label

The Democrats have officially become the prosperity party.

Yesterday the Democratic Women's National Council announced it is distributing "prosperity" certificates for the benefit of the Democratic National Committee.

Certificates sell for $1. They are the council's substitute for the usual dinners or dances. Their sale, it was explained, is calculated to catch the great mass of the people who feel unable to contribute large sums but hesitate to contribute such a small amount.

The "prosperity" certificate states: "Continue recovery—re-elect Roosevelt. Don't change horses in the middle of the stream."

Landon, Borah May Draw Up Party's Planks

Coalition of 2 Candidates Hinted; Leaders Meet in Cleveland Today.

A Landon-Borah coalition in writing the 1936 Republican platform was projected as a possibility into the political picture last night.

The possibility arose from reports that William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor and author, as an emissary of Gov. Alf M. Landon, had invited Senator William E. Borah to collaborate in writing the party declaration of principles and planks.

White was understood to have conferred with the Idaho Senator over the week-end and to have urged that he attend the convention as a delegate and represent Idaho on the resolutions committee. Should the Landon forces control the convention it was believed in some circles that White would head the resolutions committee.

What attitude the Idahoan would take in response to the suggestion was unknown. There was a suggestion that such a coalition, yielding to the Senator's liberal views, might write a set of planks that would raise the active opposition of Eastern leaders and the followers of former President Herbert Hoover. On the other hand, giving Borah an opportunity to share in writing the platform might, it was pointed out, remove any danger of his quitting the convention, a course that he has hinted at in case the party's campaign is not made along the liberal lines he demands.

Leaders Go to Cleveland.

The coalition suggestion came as G. O. P. leaders were leaving here for Cleveland, where the arrangements committee for the national convention will meet today and tomorrow to select a keynote speaker and attend to a score of other matters in connection with the convention opening June 9.

There were reports last night that the Landon forces, headed by John D. M. Hamilton, would favor C. Wayland Brooks, Republican nominee for Governor of Illinois, as the keynoter. In opposition, it was said a bloc was in the making to advance Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, for the keynote address.

Another report in political circles last night was that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, probably would be the keynoter for the Democratic convention at Philadelphia, with Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, as permanent chairman.

By the Associated Press.

Political developments here yesterday included:

Edgar J. Cook, Chicago, who heads the Borah-for-President campaign in Illinois, told reporters he expected 24 delegates to the Republican convention from his State to "follow the law" and to support the Idaho Senator. The 24, he said, must follow the wishes of the voters in their districts. He disputed the claim of Col. Frank Knox, of Chicago, to 48 of the 49 district delegates.

Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice reported to the clerk of the House receipts of $101,060 in the first two months of the year, and expenditures of $96,388 in the same period, including a pay roll of $13,000.

Receipts Are Itemized.

Chief receipts were loans of $76,692 from the Radio League of the Little Flower, and $2,000 from the St. Therese Parish, at Royal Oak, Mich. Contributions of $22,368 were reported

The report was the first filed by Coughlin's organization under the corrupt practices act, which requires reports from all groups soliciting contributions for use in national political campaigns.

Another report to the House showed the national Borah for President committee, with headquarters here, had collected in contributions $3,518 up to March 20 and spent $1,801.

Five contributions of $500 each were reported by the Borah committee, from Frederick L. Cole, of Pasadena; Salmon O. Levinson, of Chicago; Oliver O. Haga, Boise; Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, and former Representative Royal C. Johnson, of South Dakota.

Cora Rubin, the Senator's secretary, had contributed $100 to his campaign fund.

when Gov. Smith was right, but he does not quote what the Senator from Delaware said about Gov. Smith when he was right," Robinson said. "He prefers to quote him when Gov. Smith is wrong and when the Senator from Delaware is wrong, as he always is."

"Will the Senator yield?" asked Hastings.

"No!" shouted Robinson.

"Oh, ye gods and little angels," said Robinson, "think of Al Smith in company with the Senator from Delaware!"

"Will the Senator yield?" asked Hastings.

"Sit down, sit down!" shouted Robinson. "Of course, I won't yield. The Senator will take his medicine."

"Al may have made a mistake when he parted with his friends and supporters of 1928, but he won't make the mistake of going to bed with the Senator from Delaware."

Hastings persisted in demanding the floor and Robinson temporarily subsided.

"Amused," Says Arkansan.

"The trouble with yielding to the Senator from Arkansas, he said, "is that he always insists on making a speech. Does the Senator from Arkansas think he answered my speech?"

"Was it a speech?" Robinson asked. "We are entitled to some amusement here and every time the Senator performs it pleases me. He always adds strength to the Democratic Party. There was a primary election in Illinois the other day, and President Roosevelt got the majority of the votes. What was that other party?"

Robinson scratched his head.

"Oh, yes," he said, finally, "the Republican Party."

Hastings referred again to Smith and others leaving the Democratic organization.

"What is the Senator angry about?" asked Robinson.

"I don't squirm as much as you do," said Hastings.

Robinson wanted to know whether the Hastings speech was a product of the new Republican National Committee "brain trust," and why Hastings had quit attacking the New Deal "brain trust."

"Every time the Senator from Delaware speaks the New Deal gets stronger," he said.

FCC Hearing Takes Up Basis Of Phone Rates

Becker and Gifford Again Tangle at Inquiry Into A. T. & T. Records.

The question the average telephone customer asks himself once every month—whether the size of his bill is justified—knitted the brows and wrinkled the foreheads of the Federal Communications Commission yesterday.

Their legal and accounting investigating staff, fresh from a three-week recess prowl through the New York City files of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., which they are investigating, plunged straightway into the complex background of the rates now being charged.

After a lively interlude during which Samuel Becker, special counsel for the FCC, tangled sharply with Walter S. Gifford, urbane president of the A. T. & T., the investigation plowed on into a mass of complex technical and legal detail.

Becker reminded Gifford that the telephone president had once referred to licensing contracts between the A. T. & T. and the associate companies as "the backbone of the industry."

Gifford responded that he was familiar with them in a general way.

"You are interested in this history, are you not, Mr. Gifford?" asked Becker.

Said Gifford:

"Yes, but not as much as in the present. I am trying to give telephone service today, not 80 years ago."

Becker asked the commission to strike this answer from the record, and to insist on Gifford's answering questions directly.

In going over the history of the license contracts, Becker drove sharply at the records of A. T. & T. attorneys in rate cases throughout the country, bringing up differences between their stands at various times. He stated that the payment of 4½ per cent of annual gross revenues by associated companies to the American company had been of high importance in rate cases.

Gifford said that it was not important to him—what attorneys had said before 1918 in rate cases.

Becker snapped:

"Never mind of what importance that is to you. It is important to the public whether or not they should pay between $13,000,000 and $15,000,000 a year for services which the representatives of the public claim they ought not to pay."

Becker was seeking to show that the A. T. & T., the holding company for the associate companies, and which holds investments of over $2,000,000,000 in the securities of those companies as its largest single asset, holds those securities for the income to be derived from them, and that this income of $116,000,000 in 1934 was of more importance to the company's existence and success than the license fees of $13,000,000 that year from the associate companies.

The A. T. & T. has held that it holds the stock of those companies because of "responsibilities" and "obligations" under the licensing contracts. Becker was countering with a drive to show that the A. T. & T. has no other operation except to participate in the license contracts.

Heart Disease 'Cure' Claimed By 4 Physicians

Complete Rest and Low Calorie Diet Are Aids, Society Is Told.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 20.—Four physicians tonight offered evidence before the New York County Medical Society that coronary thrombosis, heart-clot affliction which strikes down many business and professional leaders, can in many cases be treated so as to prolong life.

Attacks of the disease hitherto had been regarded generally as almost invariably fatal, the Medical Information Bureau of the New York Academy of Medicine said.

By giving the patient complete rest and a low calorie diet, Drs. Arthur M. Master, Harry L. Jaffe and Simon Dack said in a joint presentation, the mortality rate "can be conspicuously reduced."

The physicians said that some instances were "inevitably" fatal, but that a study of 267 attacks had convinced them that "a first attack rarely is fatal and that the mortality of subsequent attacks is only moderate, if a regime of prolonged bed rest and limited diet is employed and the injudicious use of drugs . . . avoided."

"Consequently, the pessimism with which coronary artery thrombosis has been regarded seems to us no longer justified," they concluded.

Only 8 per cent of the studied group died of a first attack, and only 16.5 per cent for all attacks, they said. The average age of those who died was 57. Some were as young as 27. Reduction of bodily activity to a minimum and restriction of diet eased strain on the heart muscle, they said, without harming the patient in curtailing his food.

Dr. Edward F. Bland, offering results of 461 cases observed in 15 years of private practice, said "coronary thrombosis is not primarily a disease of the aged but takes its greatest toll from the ranks of prominent business, administrative and professional men during the most productive decade in their lives."

Twice as many women as men succumbed during the first month of an attack and men lived longer among the survivors, he observed.

"Prolonged nervous tension directly related to professional or business responsibility appears to be the most important single contributing factor," he said.

"In general the younger the patient at the time of onset the longer they live."

"Patients often survive coronary thrombosis for many years in good or fair condition," he said. The majority of the patients have had angina pectoris, he added.

Norway Clears Ship's Owners Of Smuggling

Vessel Seized in New York Had Lawful Charter, U. S. Informed.

By the Associated Press.

The Norwegian government has notified the State Department that an investigation by the public prosecutor in Norway has cleared the owners of the tramp steamer Reidun of any violation of a Norwegian statute prohibiting vessels from smuggling.

When the Reidun was chartered for the voyage on which it was alleged to have transported alcohol to a point off the island of St. Pierre for transhipment to American ports, it was specified in the charter that the ship would be used only for lawful purposes, the communication said.

The Norwegian note was in reply to representations from the United States against the Reidun after Coast Guard cutters had trailed and photographed alleged smuggling activities.

Officials said that the Norwegian law against smuggling was enacted to assist the United States in combatting rum running in 1926 and that the Norwegian government has co-operated with American officials to prevent Norwegian ships from engaging in such traffic.

The ship now is held in New York and four of its officers, under indictment in Charleston, S. C., are slated to go on trial on conspiracy charges May 23. The men now are at liberty on bail.

Cousin Details Girl's Slaying

him. When we asked him what he was bringing the gun along for, he said he never could tell who he was going to meet.

"Mr. Reaguer had been drinking. He was in an ugly mood and we were afraid to disagree with him. He brought along a pint bottle of whisky. Willie Mae and I did not touch it. When he insisted Willie Mae have a drink, she merely touched the bottle to her lips."

It was cloudy when they left Culpeper, Miss O'Bannon recalled. As they sped over the Virginia highways toward Washington, it rained steadily.

Was Bitter, She Says.

Reaguer was bitter throughout the trip, according to Miss O'Bannon.

"He asked me if I didn't think Willie Mae had played a bad trick on him," asserted Miss O'Bannon.

"I answered he had played bad tricks on other people. I asked him later if the shotgun was loaded. He said it was, and there was plenty more ammunition."

When the party arrived in Washington it was late at night, the witness told the court.

Reaguer said they would have to go to a hotel, and so he took them to the Houston. First, however, he promised he would get a room for himself and a separate one for the girls.

"We couldn't register under our own names," said Miss O'Bannon. "Just before we went inside it was decided we would register under the name of H. L. Thomas and daughters."

Miss O'Bannon described how they entered the lobby of the hotel without baggage.

"My hand is shaking so I can't register," Reaguer said, she testified.

Wrote Names on Register.

"He handed the pen to Willie Mae, and her hand was shaking, too. So then I took the pen and wrote H. L. Thomas and party, and I wrote Richmond as the town we were from."

Following a bellboy, Reaguer and the girls got into the elevator and went to the ninth floor. There Reaguer asked both of them to his room for a glass of ice water.

"He said after that we could go to sleep," Miss O'Bannon asserted.

The register of the Houston Hotel for October 11, the night before the killing, was exhibited to the all-male jury weighing Reaguer's fate.

Before Miss O'Bannon could describe what happened the morning of the murder, court adjourned until today. She will take the stand as soon as Justice Luhring calls court to order at 10 a. m.

Most of yesterday morning's session was devoted to selecting the jury. For two and a half hours Assistant U. S. Attorneys Irvin Goldstein and Cecil Heflin, prosecuting the case, and Defense Attorneys James A. O'Shea, Burnett Miller and Alfred Goldstein concentrated on picking the venire.

No Women Selected.

The defense moved carefully in order that no women were selected. It also made a point of eliminating as talesmen men with daughters about the age of Willie Mae Wood.

Witnesses yesterday morning included Mrs. Cornelia Phillips, sister of Wood, who told how she met her brother's bride before the marriage of the attractive Culpeper girl and Wood in September, 1935; W. W. Estes, assistant morgue master, who examined Willie Mae's body after the slaying, and Dr. Richard Rosenberg, deputy coroner, who performed the autopsy.

In the packed courtroom, determined to aid in the prosecution of the man charged with slaying his girl-bride, was her bereaved husband, Herbert Wood.

Wood, 6 feet tall and curly-haired, wiped the tears from his eyes as he watched Miss O'Bannon on the stand. He sat at the rear of the court with his sister, Mrs. Phillips, who sometimes took his large hand in hers and comforted him.

Clad in full mourning, her face partially hidden by a black veil, Mrs. Dolores Fletcher, mother of Willie Mae, glared the length of the courtroom at the bowed defendant. She leaned frequently on the arm of her younger daughter, Miss Margaret Fletcher.

Reaguer has entered a plea of "not guilty," but what the course of the defense will be when the case gains headway was not divulged.

The case is the first to be tried in the new Criminal Court, No. 3, recently created.

Florida Victim Says Policeman Aided Floggers

Sam Rogers Tells Court of Beating Fatal to His Companion.

By the Associated Press.

Bartow, Fla., April 20.—One of the victims in the Tampa flogging case testified today at the trial of seven former policemen in the incident that one of the officers took him to the rendezvous where he and two other organizers of unemployed workers were tarred and feathered.

Speaking firmly from the witness stand, Sam Rogers, 37, member of the modern Democrats, coalition political organization, told a startling story of a primitive beating administered to him in a woods outside of Tampa last November 30.

Rogers, first of the flogging victims to testify, said he and the two others, Joseph Shoemaker, who died of his injuries, and Eugene F. Poulnot were abducted outside the Tampa police headquarters after being questioned there regarding possible "Communist activities."

Rogers said some policemen took him to the outskirts of Tampa and transferred him to one of a line of automobiles waiting there. In the second car he was blindfolded with a handkerchief and driven "off the hard-surfaced road on to a sand road, then off that road to where the bushes scraped the sides of the car.

Jerked Out of Car.

"I was jerked and pushed out of the car. Some one jerked at my pants, I told them to wait, I could undo the buckle, but they jerked off my clothes. I was jerked across some logs.

"Two men held my hands, one man held my head down in the sand, and one or two others held my feet, and they began immediately to beat me."

"About how many blows were struck?" asked State Attorney Rex Farrior.

"Oh, it would be impossible for anybody to count them under those conditions. I would estimate about 40 or 50 licks."

"Can you tell what they used to beat you with?"

"Not exactly. It was something like a heavy coarse belt, or a water hose, and then something else like a chain."

"All right, then what happened?"

Tarred, Feathered Him.

"Then they put tar on me from my ribs, my shoulder blades, to the bend in my knees in the back. Then they tarred and feathered me in front from my chest down to my knees. Then they turned me back on my face again and put other feathers on my back.

"While they were taking off my clothes I could see lights. I heard other cars come up, and heard them call Shoemaker and Poulnot. They took Shoemaker next. They began to beat him——"

Pat Whitaker, chief defense counsel, objected and asked Rogers if he still had his blindfold on.

Farrior objected that the defense attorney could not cross-examine until the witness completed direct testimony. The exchange ended when Farrior asked Rogers: "How did you know they were beating Shoemaker?"

"I could hear it," Rogers replied. "And he began to groan and complain."

The defense interposed new objections, holding the testimony should be stricken because it was not shown the defendants were involved and because it did not involve Poulnot. The court reserved decision.

Six former Tampa policemen are on trial on charges of kidnaping Poulnot. R. G. Tittsworth, former police chief and the seventh defendant, is charged as an accessory after the fact.

Rogers, tall and white-haired, identified Defendant C. W. Carlisle as one of the officers who raided a meeting of the modern Democrats at the home of A. M. Herald.

Carlisle gazed steadily at Rogers as the witness testified Carlisle offered to take him home after the questioning at the police station.

"We went downstairs," Rogers recounted, "and he went along by my side, he said 'come here, here's a car, I'll take you home.' I didn't think there was anything wrong with that . . .

"Carlisle got in on my left. There was a driver, a chauffeur, behind the wheel. Another man got in beside the chauffeur."

"What happened then?"

"Instead of turning north to take me home, we turned south." Rogers told how they drove through the city to where a line of "nine or ten" automobiles was waiting.

"The man in front of the chauffeur put a handkerchief over my face. . . Carlisle tied the handkerchief behind my head.

"Then they jerked me out of that car into the other, pressed me down on the floor and told me to lie flat, not to make any noise."

WendelSuspect Confesses Guilt; Fears for Life

Schlossman Held Without Bail; Hearing Is Set for Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 20.—Martin Schlossman, accused as one of the abductors of Paul H. Wendel, former New Jersey attorney, was held without bail late today after his counsel said Schlossman's life would be in danger if he were free.

Samuel Leibowitz, counsel for Schlossman, hinted "master minds" and "sinister influences" were at work against his client, who is charged with having forced Wendel to "confess" the Lindbergh kidnaping. Wendel later repudiated the "confession."

Leibowitz declined to amplify other than to say he referred to "certain persons in New Jersey."

Magistrate John D. Mason set Schlossman's hearing for Wednesday in Coney Island Court.

District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan said that "because of certain legal technicalities" the case would be presented to the grand jury within 24 hours.

During the afternoon Attorney General David T. Wilentz, of New Jersey, conferred at length on the case with the district attorney. He arrived at Geoghan's office shortly after the 30-year-old former laundryman was formally charged with the kidnaping.

The district attorney said Schlossman had admitted he participated in the abduction of Wendel, whose repudiated "confession" resulted in a three-day stay of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution.

Ash Linked to Crimes Here

one of the men who robbed the Woodridge-Langdon Savings Bank.

They also say he participated in the robbery of the Western Union office at 1104 Connecticut avenue northwest in June, 1932. This was a particularly brazen crime. The office is in one of the busiest sections of the city. The robbers were unable to open the safe, so they boldly carried it out to their automobile. It contained $260 in traveler's checks.

Ash, a former convict, is reputed to be a member of an old Maryland family. His real name, according to police, is Charles Thornton Bean.

When arrested early Sunday morning in the Greenwich Village opium den, he was stupid from the narcotic. He was armed, but made no attempt to fight off the Federal agents who arrested him. With him were two former Sing Sing convicts on parole.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, late yesterday sent Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass to New York with a warrant and instructions to bring Ash here is possible.

The robbery of the San Salvador Legation in the summer of 1931 caused a furor here. For a time it was thought that Dr. Leiva might die from the slugging he had received.

As it was, 27 stitches were taken in his scalp at Emergency Hospital.

Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of State, issued a formal statement saying he was "shocked" that a foreign diplomat should be so treated.

Herbert Hoover, then in the White House, showed his solicitude by directing his physician, Capt. Joel T. Boone, U. S. N., to visit Dr. Leiva at the hospital.

The State Department began an investigation to determine whether the Metropolitan police were giving adequate protection to diplomats.

Those members of Congress who were opposed to allowing diplomats to bring liquor into a dry country used the incident as an excuse to rehash arguments they already had aired.

The only light note in the matter was supplied by Dr. Leiva himself. He told police that, in searching for the robbers, they should look for a man with a mangled finger.

"I bit one of them on the finger—hard," he said.

San Salvador later gave up the red brick residence at Connecticut avenue and Calvert street and moved its legation elsewhere. Thereafter a bootlegger took over the house. After repeal an unsuccessful attempt was made to operate a night club there.

The building was torn down a few months ago.

Jurors

was illegally constituted. This plea was overruled.

Thereupon, the case was taken to the Court of Appeals, which on March 25 reversed the judgment of the Police Court.

Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, who wrote the opinion of the appellate court, held that the sixth amendment to the Constitution guaranteed to everyone the right to trial by an impartial jury. This theory of impartiality, he said, could not be carried out if Government employes and pensioners were to act as jurors in criminal cases in which the Government was involved.

Solicitor General Reed, in making the first move yesterday toward a review of this judgment by the Supreme Court, listed these "errors" in the reasoning of the Court of Appeals:

"1. In holding that the act of August 22, 1935, is unconstitutional as contravening the sixth amendment.

"2. In holding that Government employes and pensioners are disqualified by interest from acting as jurors in cases in which the United States is a party.

"3. In reversing the judgment of the Police Court of the District of Columbia."

After sketching in the background of the act by which Congress authorized employes and pensioners of the Federal and District governments to serve on juries, Solicitor Reed said:

"The statute involved merely removes the absolute disqualification of Government employes and pensioners, which was previously a ground of challenge for principal cause, and leaves such persons subject to challenge for actual bias, as in the case of other jurors.

"The reasonableness of this change, and its consistency with the requirements of an impartial jury, are evidenced by the application of the statute to the facts of the present case.

"The Government had no pecuniary interest in the case; its interest was solely that of the sovereign as keeper of the peace. The natural interest of the jurors in question would be that of citizens; none of them was employed by any interested department, and the two who were employed as clerks presumably enjoyed the protection of civil service status.

Presumption of Bias.

"A conclusive presumption of bias in such circumstances, we submit, can be negatived by statute without any impairment of the defendant's constitutional right to trial by an impartial jury."

It was reported after the Court of Appeals announced its decision that many verdicts involving criminal cases here would be voided. This, however, was erroneous.

If the Supreme Court should share the view of the Court of Appeals, only four cases might have to be set aside. In these cases the attorneys made an exception to the presence on the juries of Government workers or pensioners.

One of these cases involves the recent conviction of 39 defendants in a huge liquor law conspiracy. The others were of a minor character.

Industry Fund Ordered To Help Soviet Workers

Moscow, April 20 (AP).—The Soviet government directed all industrial enterprises today to set aside 4 per cent of their ordinary net profits for a fund to improve living conditions of the workers.

Fifty per cent of the profits above the annual production plan must go to the fund, to be used principally for housing. Soviet enterprises are permitted to make profits which are used ordinarily for industrial expansion.

U. S. Envoy Offers Duce Henry N. Gay Library

Rome, April 20 (AP).—American Ambassador Breckinridge Long today offered Premier Mussolini the 20,000-volume library of Henry Nelson Gay, of Newton, Mass. Long made the offer as one of the library's trustees, conditioned on its approval by the other American trustees.

The books, mainly concerned with the United States, would be added to the library of the Italian centers for American studies recently inaugurated by Fulvio Suvich, undersecretary for foreign affairs, with 18,000 volumes.

TRADITION

Even today in the great transatlantic liners of Cunard White Star the sailmaker works in canvas. He shapes a hatch cover or sews a wind shelter . . . but his tools and his skill have not changed. In himself he suggests much of the British tradition...the tradition which embraces service as well as seamanship . . . uniting all departments in a common desire to make your crossing a memorably pleasant one.

In the "Queen Mary", arriving in New York June 1st, the British tradition will find its supreme expression. She will be every inch a real ship...worthy of the nation of builders and mariners whose descendants will man her.

and employment. They are speaking of themselves as a lost generation. Is this going to be permitted to be true? Not if we have the vision."

Lauds CCC Camps.

Praising the CCC camps as "of untold blessing," Mrs. Becker warned that "bewildered and discouraged and lacking sure foundations, youth is fertile soil for the shrewd propagandists of dangerous social and political theories. If we are to be fortified against a youth movement which may tear down the building of which they know not and set civilization back unknown ages, let American citizens look to their homes and their communities and provide character training and occupation for their youth."

A festive spirit dominated the Congress' proceedings. The D. A. R. members, many of them gray-haired, and most of them in their finest evening gowns with corsages to match applauded vigorously each attack on communism and socialism and each reaffirmation of faith in the Constitution.

The Congress was trumpeted into official existence with an assembly call by Arthur S. Witcomb. With the U. S. Marine Band playing a military march, the girl pages solemnly paraded into the hall bearing aloft flags of the respective State chapters. The national officers and the president general followed, each bearing a bouquet in her arms.

The audience remained standing while the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, read the invocation, the pledge of allegiance was made to the flag, the "Star-Spangled Banner" sung and the American's Creed recited by William Tyler Page, the author. Greetings followed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs; Charlotte C. Aycrigg, president-general of the National Society of the Daughters of the Revolution; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, national president of the Children of the Revolution, and Henry F. Baker, president-general, and Dr. Thomas Edward Green, general chaplain, of the Sons of the Revolution.

Many Earlier Meetings.

The Daughters assembled in the hall shortly before 8 p. m. after a morning and afternoon spent in numerous pre-convention committee conferences, luncheon meetings and discussion assemblies. The outstanding event of the afternoon was the symposium on national defense, held in the grand ballroom at the Mayflower Hotel, and presided over by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, chairman of the committee of national defense through patriotic education.

Almost 2,000 Daughters crowded the ballroom floor and balconies to hear Arthur M. Hyde, Secretary of Agriculture in Hoover's Administration, defend rugged individualism and assail Socialist-minded clergymen; Representative Joe Starnes, of Alabama, urge a more restrictive immigration policy; Representative Colgate W. Darden, jr., advocate a "big Navy;" H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, defend the R. O. T. C., and Robert M. Thurston, of the University of Minnesota, and Geraldine May, of the University of Oregon, outline what is being done to check radical activities in American universities.

In his speech on "Socialism in the Churches," Hyde charged that "a considerable number of Socialists and Communists now stand in our pulpits, occupy positions of power in our church organizations and are pegged into strategic positions on official church rosters."

"Christian Socialism" Impossible.

"Christian socialism is impossible," he continued. "Socialism is arrant materialism, while Christianity is a spiritual relationship. There is an irrepressible conflict between those who believe in a philosophy of collectivism and those who defend the faith of liberty."

Defending rugged individualism from the charges that the competition it fostered was un-Christian, Hyde stressed that "Christ worked with individuals, not the mass," that He "did not attack systems" and that "His message was spiritual, not material."

Outlining the ideal society, Hyde contended that "rugged individualism accomplished those aims "less imperfectly than any other system."

"There are faults in the present system," he admitted, "but the ills of materialism will not be relieved by more materialism. Society can take from some, by conscription, or by bludgeoning of taxation the savings which their thrift, industry and self-denial accumulated, and can distribute those savings to those who have not denied themselves to save.

"But if it does that, society kills the initiative, the inventiveness and spiritual power of liberty from which a myriad of human blessings have come."

Immigration Bill Scored.

Urging the D. A. R. to "throw its support" against the proposed Kerr-Coolidge immigration bill because it was "too favorable to aliens," Starnes attacked Commissioner of Immigration Daniel W. McCormack for offending "good taste and sound ethics, if he has not actually violated the law, in the unprecedented manner in which he has lobbied with and propagandized the Congress and the people."

As a substitute for the Kerr-Coolidge bill, Starnes put forward his own immigration bill, drawn up jointly with Senator Reynolds, advocating the reduction of immigration quotas by 90 per cent, imposition of an intelligence test on all immigrants and the registration and fingerprinting of all aliens in this country.

Byrd Defends R. O. T. C.

In his defense of the R. O. T. C., Byrd denied that compulsory military training developed a state of militarism in the minds of undergraduates, or that such training was against the teachings of Christianity, but acclaimed it as "a definite part of our program of national defense."

Had an organization such as the R. O. T. C. existed prior to the War Between the States, he said, that conflict could have been ended with a Union victory "in 10 or 12 months." Denouncing advocates of disarmament "who believe the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans are sufficient safeguards," he contended that "the Panama Canal could not be defended and would not be in use one day after war began."

The symposium was opened with a short talk on "Our Common Cause" by Mrs. John L. Whitehurst. After the programmed speakers were finished, there were short talks by Arden S. Turner, Arthur B. Barrows and Charles H. John, three members of the Student Americaneers, formed to combat student radicalism.

Other affairs held yesterday included morning meetings of the Alabama group and the Wisconsin Daughters in the Alabama and Wisconsin rooms of the Mayflower; luncheons of the Arizona group at the Raleigh Hotel and of the Illinois Daughters in the Chinese room of the Mayflower, and a tea of the Iowa Daughters at the Congressional Club.

Guests at Session.

Guests of honor at last night's session included Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel Roper, Secretary of Labor Frances L. Perkins, Admiral and Mrs. William H. Standley, Falk Konitza, Minister of Albania; Dr. and Mrs. Adrian Recinos, Minister of Guatemala; Dr. and Mrs. Antonia de Bianchi, Portuguese Minister; Demetrios Sicilianos, Minister of Greece; Mohamed Amine Youssef, Minister of Egypt; Dr. Alfred Bilmanis, Minister of Latvia; Mr. and Mrs. Andres Pasporiza, Minister of the Dominican Republic.

This morning's session will be given over principally to the reports of the various committee heads. At 8 o'clock tonight, the president general's reception will be held in Constitution Hall, with the pages' ball following at 10 o'clock at the Hotel Mayflower.

Among the State luncheons planned for this afternoon are Connecticut, Kentucky, Maryland, New Jersey and New York at the Hotel Mayflower; Mississippi, at the Carlton; New Hampshire and Virginia, at the Willard; Oklahoma and West Virginia, at the Washington, and Pennsylvania, at the Shoreham.

State dinners to be held tonight include Delaware, Kansas, Alabama, Georgia, Indiana, Tennessee and Texas, at the Mayflower; Vermont, at the Willard; Rhode Island and Ohio, at the Washington, and Maine, at the Powhatan.

President's D. A. R. Message

The text of President Roosevelt's letter to Mrs. William A. Becker, president matron general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, enunciating his views on national defense and disarmament, follows:

Dear Mrs. Becker:

I have looked forward with pleasure to the opportunity to appear this year before the forty-fifth Annual Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution. You will understand, I am sure, why that is not now possible. I will be grateful, however, if you will extend my cordial greetings to the officers and delegates assembled here.

This Administration, as you know, stands for adequate national defense. It stands also, for the policy of the good neighbor. There are not contradictory principles. As they are followed by this Administration they represent an expression of the purpose of peace.

Confusion of Thought.

There is much confusion of thought and some unnecessary apprehension on this matter of national defense. There are sincere and patriotic people who have been led to believe that our military and naval establishments are inferior and inadequate. That, so stated, is a totally wrong conclusion. It has been the aim of this Administration to make our national defense efficient and to keep it adequate. Today our defense forces are on a stronger peace-time basis than before. It is our purpose to keep them that way.

There are other equally sincere and patriotic people who look upon our system of national defense as much too large for our needs; an unnecessary expense, a threat, perhaps, to peace. That, too, is a totally wrong conclusion. When we say adequate defense we mean just that. The prospect of a war of aggression has no place in our American policy. It has no place in our military or naval program. We are maintaining a system that will meet our defensive needs. We have no plans for any other kind of a system.

Several Factors Invoved.

Americans generally will agree that some measure of preparedness for defense is necessary. They disagree as to how much is determined by several factors. First of all, it is determined by a very common-sense fact. If we take on any of the obligations of self-protection, it follows that we must take on all the obligations of self-protection. We have, for example, two extensive and widely separated coasts to guard. There would be no sense in a preparedness policy adequate for the defense of only one coast. Defense must be adequate, not sectionally adequate, but nationally adequate.

Now our answer to the question as to what is nationally adequate is not always the same. It changes—is bound to change—with changing international situations. If this were a disarming world, it is obvious that our needs would be proportionately decreasing. I regret that today this is not that kind of a world. I regret it deeply.

But here we confront the question of disarmament. On that issue our policy is clear. That policy has two elements in it. First, we propose to press, continually, for a limitation of armament by international agreement. Second, failing to get that, we will make no increase of our own armament unless other powers by increasing their armament, make increase by us necessary to our national safety.

If progress in armament limitation has been slow, progress in other areas has been rapid. We have stated the principle of the good neighbor as the standard for the conduct of our foreign policy. We have begun the practice of that principle. Already that practice has ushered in a new era of good will between ourselves and the great nations of the Americas. One after another we are liquidating the causes of friction and misunderstanding between us. A new confidence has been established. This summer's Pan-American Conference will meet in an atmosphere of unprecedented friendliness. What we have achieved in that one area is a measure of what we desire to achieve through the whole range of our international relationship.

That achievement is wholly consistent with our program of national defense. It is an expression of the very objective on which our natinal defense is based.

We have a distinterested, consistent and successful foreign policy. In it we give no thought to a war of aggression on the part of the United States. We stand firmly by our solemn treaty obligation renouncing war as an instrument of national policy.

Very sincerely yours.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

● Eighteen years ago Paul A. Thomas devised the first accurate, reliable method of treating local scalp disorders. Then, as today, Thomas treatment ended dandruff, stopped abnormal hairfall and promoted hair growth on thin and bald spots. It consistently produces these results—and because of its success, The Thomas' have grown to an organization with 45 offices throughout the United States and Canada.

Today Thomas treatment is more effective than it has ever been. New methods are constantly being tested and when something is proved to be of definite value, Thomas clients are the first to receive benefit. Basically, however, Thomas treatment remains the same, because no method has ever been found which produces results as consistently as does the original Thomas method.

We wish, sincerely, that we could sell La Salle in the low-price field—for, then, almost everybody would buy a La Salle. But it simply isn't possible. La Salle is designed and built to be a fine car—and cannot compete in the low-price field. A. J. Clarke, 81, Dies; Reporter Here 62 Years

Funeral Services Today for Man Who 'Covered' Death of Garfield.

Funeral services for Alfred J. Clarke, 81, veteran Washington newspaperman, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Joseph Gawler Sons Funeral home. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Clarke, who had been a reporter here for 62 years, was born in Brooklyn. He came to this city in 1864 and has resided here continuously since.

At the time of his retirement four years ago he was employed by the Washington Star. Last year he left his obituary with that office. He did so, he said, because friends and associates of his early days had died.

Went to Associated Press.

In 1869 he kept books for his father, William Clarke, foreman of the composing room of the Daily Morning Chronicle, then published on the site of the present Gayety Theater. Drifting into newspaper work by writing small articles for the Chronicle, he was later employed on several Washington papers now defunct before going to the Associated Press in 1882.

Clarke covered the White House, Treasury and State, War and Navy Departments for that organization until 1892, when he joined the Star staff. He covered the State, War and Navy Building for the Star until his retirement because of ill health in 1932.

Through his many years covering the State War and Navy Departments he became a veritable walking reference book and was consulted by his associates for precedents, past performances and probable consequences.

Covered Garfield Death.

While working for the Daily Critic, a small afternoon paper published in the old Chronicle Building on Ninth street, near E, he covered the assassination of President Garfield in 1881, and his subsequent death in Elberon, N. J., the next September.

The veteran newspaperman was a charter member of the Washington Press Club and a member of the old club when located in "newspaper row" on Fourteenth street, near E.

Clark, who had been in ill health since his retirement, entered Emergency Hospital January 29. Broncho-pneumonia and complications caused his death.

Victor Jaeger Funeral Held; Insurance Man

Funeral services for Victor E. Jaeger, assistant superintendent of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. of Washington, were held yesterday at 8:30 a. m. at his home, 217 Fifth street northeast, followed by a requiem mass at St. Joseph's Church at 9 a. m. Burial was in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Jaeger died at his home Friday evening after a prolonged illness.

A native of Washington, he was educated in the public schools here, and was a graduate of McKinley High School. Following his graduation he worked in the insurance business, serving with several companies.

In 1920 he assumed the management of the Blue Granite Co., a subsidiary of the Allan E. Walker Investment Co. He later became engaged in the local building business.

Mr. Jaeger became associated with the Equitable Life Insurance Co. in 1927, and for the past six years has been assistant superintendent here. He was a member of the Elks and the Modern Woodmen of America.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Edna Boyd Jaeger; two sons, William E. and Henry B. Jaeger; a daughter, Doris Jaeger; his mother, Mrs. Henry W. Jaeger; two brothers, Ferdinand Jaeger, of New York, and Dr. Henry W. Jaeger, of this city, and a sister, Mrs. Cleveland Richardson.

Suffrage Leader Dies

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. MARY M. LOCKWOOD.

Mrs. Lockwood Will Be Buried This Afternoon

Funeral of Clarendon Resident to Be Held at Home at 3 o'Clock.

Funeral Services for Mrs. Mary Morris Lockwood, 65, who died at her home, Kirkwood, at Clarendon, Va., Sunday, will be held at 3 p. m. today. The Rev. James Tucker, rector, of St. John's Episcopal Church of Georgetown, will officiate. Burial will be in Oakhill Cemetery.

Mrs. Lockwood was born at Philadelphia, coming to Arlington County, where she took an active part in political and civic affairs, 32 years ago.

In 1916 Mrs. Lockwood was one of the leaders in the suffrage movement and became the first treasurer of the Congressional Union. She was one of the movers establishing an active Republican Party in Arlington County and became the first president of the Arlington County Republican Woman's Club. She also established the Congressional Union of the Eighth District of Virginia and became its first president.

Mrs. Lockwood was the first and only Republican woman ever to run as a candidate for delegate to the General Assembly from Arlington County.

She served for eight years as the president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Virginia.

During her life in Arlington County, Mrs. Lockwood led the movement for the establishment of a public library in Clarendon and the erection of the Clarendon Health Center, together with many other civic improvements.

In 1924 she established the association of the original 13 States, of which she became its first president.

She was an extensive traveler and appeared on the public platform in the interest of the women of the country in practically every section of Virginia and in many other States.

In failing health since 1932, Mrs. Lockwood had retired from active work in her many fields of interest.

Mrs. Lockwood was married in 1890. Her husband, Henry Lockwood; a son, James B. Lockwood, and three grandchildren survive.

Mrs. Edith Bolton, Native Here, Dead

Mrs. Edith Bolton, 71, life-long resident of the District, died yesterday at the home of her son, Dr. Robert M. Bolton, 3728 Legation street northwest.

Born here, she was educated in the public schools. Her brother, Simon Flynn, a former Washington newspaperman, is now a retired Chicago banker. He was president of the Chicago Stock Exchange Bank. Henry Boyce Bolton, her husband, died in 1917. For many years she was an active member of the Society of Natives.

Mrs. Bolton is survived by two sons, Dr. Robert M. Bolton and Dr. Boyce R. Bolton, and five grandchildren, all of this city.

Clyde G. Byers Dies; Newspaperman, 32

Clyde G. Byers, 32, newspaperman, formerly employed in this city by the United Press, died at Denver Saturday, the Associated Press reported. His death, the dispatch said, was attributed to poisoning.

Byers, a native of Logansport, Ind., had been in ill health for same time.

Funeral Today At White House For Louis Howe

President, Mrs. Roosevelt Will Attend Burial at Fall River, Mass.

Many notables will attend the White House funeral at 4:30 p. m. today of Louis McHenry Howe, confidante and secretary of the President, who died Saturday.

The services will be held beneath the dimly lit chandeliers in the big east room, scene of the last rites for President Warren G. Harding in 1922.

Only a small group of Government officials, relatives and friends will be present.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will depart tonight with the body aboard a special train for the burial tomorrow near Howe's "other home" at Fall River, Mass.

Plans for the funeral were completed by Mrs. Howe and her son, Hartley, who arrived here Sunday, with the aid of Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Rev. C. Ernest Smith, rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, will have charge of the services.

Daughter to Attend.

Among those who will arrive from out of town in time for the funeral will be Mrs. Robert Baker, a daughter, and her husband, Prof. Baker, of Urbana, Ill.; the President's daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, and her husband, and the eldest Roosevelt son, James.

Marvin H. McIntyre and Stephen T. Early, Howe's White House secretariat aids, will accompany the special train to Fall River.

After the burial there at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow the President will go to his Hyde Park, N. Y., home to remain until Saturday, when he will drive to New York for a speech before the National Democratic Clubs.

Mr. Roosevelt canceled an engagement to speak before the Daughters of the American Revolution last night so he could remain with the Howe family.

Sorrow in White House.

Howe died Saturday night in Naval Hospital after a long illness. He was 65.

His death could have caused no more sorrow in the White House had he been a member of the Roosevelt family.

He was eulogized by Mrs. Roosevelt at her press conference.

"Mr. Howe was extraordinarily wise," she said.

"He was an old friend, a very close friend who had lived so much of his life with us he had a room in whatever house we happened to be in.

"He disliked sham sentiment and sham feeling. He believed people must have sincerity and integrity in everything they did. He was a man with extraordinary courage and of an indomitable will."

James Dunn Dies; Retired Banker

James Dunn, 71, retired banker, of Petersburg, Va., died yesterday after an illness of a year at his home, 2116 Bancroft place northwest. Funeral services will be held in Petersburg tomorrow.

A graduate of the University of Virginia and member of a prominent Virginia family, Dunn moved to Washington 18 months ago with Mrs. Dunn after his retirement from the bank of which his father was a former president.

He is survived by his wife, three brothers, Dr. William Dunn, the Rev. Joseph Dunn and Thomas Dunn, all of Richmond, and one sister, Mrs. Kirkland Dunn, of Norfolk.

Art Exhibition Is Opened Here In Eight Stores

Informal Public Reception Is Planned Tomorrow Afternoon.

An informal reception will be given tomorrow afternoon to welcome the public to the Greater Washington Independent Art Exhibition, sponsored by the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs and The Washington Post, which is now on view in eight downtown stores.

Artists and members of Federated clubs are asked to go to one of the galleries where they may aid in receiving the guests between 2 and 5 o'clock. The affair is designed to give the public a personal contact with Washington artists and with the members of the organization which made the exhibition possible.

Several prominent guests also will welcome the visitors.

The exhibition units are placed in galleries in the following stores: Julius Garfinckel & Co., The Hecht Co., Frank R. Jelleff, Inc., S. Kann Sons Co., Lansburgh & Bro., Palais Royal, W. and J. Sloane, and Woodward & Lothrop.

The show, which was opened yesterday, will continue through April 30.

Nazis' Envoy to Egypt Is Missing After Storm

Cairo, Egypt, April 20 (AP).—Despite a day-long search by airplanes, Baron Eberhard Von Stohrer, German minister to Egypt, was still missing at dusk today.

A cryptic telephone message from Baharia had reported earlier in the day that the diplomat had been found there, but an Egyptian air force machine landed on the spot and reported that there was no trace of the minister.

Authorities said they feared Baron Von Stohrer had been stranded in the middle of the desert in his automobile. He left Cairo Saturday to attend the royal automobile races at Bahari and a sand storm swept over the area into which he had driven.

Slum Removal Urged by Ickes In 4-Point Plan

Tells Senators He Favors Wagner's $876,000,000 Housing Proposal.

Support for slum clearance and low-cost housing, as envisioned by Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, in his $876,000,000 housing proposal, was voiced yesterday by Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes before the Senate Labor Committee. Others appearing in behalf of the measure were A. R. Clas, director of the PWA housing division; Harry C. Bates, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and Senator Wagner.

Secretary Ickes told the committee the United States has fallen behind many other nations in providing adequate dwellings.

"Millions of our citizens," he said, "are compelled to live in houses unfit for human habitation.

"Slum conditions do not exist in isolated areas or only in large cities, but may be found in practically every community from coast to coast," he declared. "It has long been known that the slum furnishes the environment most conducive to sickness and disease and fosters juvenile delinquency, crime, vice and immorality. * * *

"Private enterprise has proven itself unable to supply adequate housing accommodations for families of low income at rentals which they can afford to pay."

Points Out Four Points.

A realistic public housing program, Ickes said, should embody the following four points:

1. Decentralization of responsibility.

2. Adequate safeguards to protect legitimate private enterprise against Governmental competition.

3. Recognition of the necessity of Federal assistance by way of loans and grants to local communities.

4. Appropriate measures to keep the expenditure of Federal funds at a minimum by encouraging as large an investment of private capital as possible.

Ickes indorsed the $876,000,000 four-year program of the Wagner bill and commended its provisions for Government grants to make rents low enough for low-income groups, but he objected to having the program administered by a semi-independent board of five at $10,000 salaries. He urged, in the event the bill is adopted, that experienced men in the present Housing Division be retained under the new set-up.

"About 18,000,000 families in America, or 60 per cent of the Nation, have incomes of not more than $1,000 a year," Wagner said. "This means they can spend only $200 or $250 a year for rent. But taking the country as a whole, at least $315 per year is necessary to provide a family of five with three and one-half rooms of decent and sanitary quarters, at an average rate of $7.50 a room per month. There must, therefore, be partial public financial support to remedy a threatening social and economic evil."

Housing Director Clas told the committee that private industry is unable to solve the housing program.

"The very existence of our widespread slums demonstrates the inability of private enterprise in the past to make a substantial contribution to the problem," Clas said. "Repair and modernization of single units distributed haphazardly throughout bad areas are swallowed up by the surrounding squalor. It is essential that projects of self-protecting size be undertaken with full municipal collaboration," he declared.

Clas told the committee that there is no conflict between a public program and private program, since private building capital seeks only to operate for medium and high income groups.

Harry C. Bates, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and chairman of its housing committee, said the federation is "enthusiastically" backing the Wagner bill.

"There must be a definite long-term program for the provision of an adequate supply of low-rent housing, available to families who cannot secure decent housing through ordinary private initiative," he said.

"This program should be entrusted to a permanent authority similar to the United States Housing Authority set up in this bill. The authority should work through local public housing authorities, and co-operative or other non-profit housing agencies representing labor or consumers. These local agencies, whenever possible, should initiate, construct, own and manage the housing projects."

Senator Walsh (Democrat) Massachusetts, chairman of the Labor Committee, said further hearings on the bill would be held today and tomorrow. He was frankly skeptical that any action would be taken on the bill this session unless President Roosevelt urges its passage.

its findings and divided only on its recommendations.

In the report, one of a series following extensive hearings, the committee found that "the American munitions companies investigated have at times resorted to such unusual approaches, questionable favors and commission, and methods of 'doing the needful' as to constitute, in effect, a form of bribery of foreign governmental officials or of their close friends in order to secure business."

It charged that "some of the munitions companies have occasionally had opportunities to intensify the fears of people for their neighbors and have used them to their own profit.

"The committee finds further," the report said, "that the munitions companies have secured the active support of the War, Navy, Commerce and even State departments in their sales abroad, even when the material was produced in England or Italy.

"The committee finds that by their aid and assistance to munitions companies, the War, Navy and Commerce departments condone, in effect, in the eyes of those foreign officials cognizant of the details of the transactions, the unethical practices of the companies which characterize their foreign sales efforts.

"The committee finds that the munitions companies have constantly exerted pressure on the War Department to allow the exportation of the most recent American improvements in warfare, and have usually been successful in securing it, and have also furnished plans of important new machines of war to their foreign agents in advance of any release by the War Department.

"The committee finds that the War Department encourages the sale of modern equipment abroad in order that the munitions companies may stay in business and be available in event of another war, and that this consideration outranks the protection of secrets.

"The committee finds that as improvements are developed here, often with the co-operation of the military service, and these improvements presumably give the United States a military advantage, we are in the anomalous position of being forced to let the other nations have the advantages which we have obtained for ourselves, in order to keep the munitions manufacturers going, so that the United States can take advantage of the same improvements which its companies have sold abroad.

"The committee finds, from official documents it has not entered into the record, that the United States naval missions to Brazil and Peru have been giving considerable help to American munitions makers, and that their participation and leadership in war games directed at 'a potential enemy' have not advanced the cause of peace in South America, and that their activity can be misinterpreted by neighboring countries as support of any military plans of the nations to which they are attached.

"The committee finds, from official documents which it has not entered into the record, that the sales of munitions to certain South American nations in excess of their normal capacity to pay, was one of the causes for the defaults on certain South American bonds, and that the sales of munitions were, in effect, financed by the American bond purchases, and the loss on the bonds was borne by the same people.

"The committee finds that the Army Ordnance Association, consisting of personnel from the munitions companies, constitutes a self-interested organization and has been active in War Department promotions."

Munitions which the committee majority recommended that the Government manufacture include warships, gun forgings, projectiles, and armor plate, to be manufactured by the Navy, and powder, rifles, pistols and machine guns, by the Army. The committee declared that it believed regulation of profits of manufacturers is easily evaded.

Adding to its reasons for the recommendations, the majority said:

"It does so also because any control over the foreign affairs of the companies, which is essential to the estoppel of present practices, will, in effect, amount to control of management, and cannot be effected successfully under the private ownership of these companies.

"It does so also because of its findings that during the World War the munitions companies insisted throughout on their pound of flesh in the form of high profits for their production, and did not let their patriotism stand in the way of their 'duty as trustees' to the stockholders."

Rome Demands All of Ethiopia As Peace Basis

City Waits News of Capture of Addis Ababa on 2,689th Birthday.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Rome, April 20.—Italy, awaiting with tense anticipation news that Marshal Pietro Badoglio's legions have marched into Addis Ababa, gave new defiance to the League of Nations tonight.

The League Council's decision to make a supreme appeal for peace in East Africa, hinting that Europe needs Italy to combat the German menace, was countered with another Italian declaration that Premier Benito Mussolini wants "all of Ethiopia."

The government made it clear that East African hostilities can cease only when negotiations with Ethiopia have entered an advanced stage.

Commenting on Baron Pompeo Aloisi's firm declarations before the League Council at Geneva a government spokesman said that Italy refuses to participate in "useless maneuvers" which could serve only to prolong the war.

Sanctions Doomed.

He interpreted the French position at Geneva as further indication that the sanctionist front against Italy is doomed.

While awaiting important communiques from Badoglio's headquarters Fascist organizations throughout the country stood by ready for mighty demonstrations to celebrate capture of Addis Ababa.

Meanwhile the country was poised for tomorrow's celebration of Rome's 2,689th birthday anniversary.

According to tradition and the records of Latin historians, Romulus founded the imperial city in 753 B. C.

Tomorrow, the 156th day of sanctions, the nation will celebrate both the birthday and the Fascist labor day with inauguration of a series of public works to beautify the entire peninsula.

King to Participate.

The King and Il Duce will alternate officiating at various points in Rome throughout the day in ceremony after ceremony.

Practically every community will inaugurate some public work. The main event of the day will be the so-called "Fascist levy," the tenth so far, at which Fascism's "war babies" will be promoted into the various branches of the party. These services will be held in the principal squares of all cities, attended by Fascist officials and local authorities.

The country's eighth census also will be taken tomorrow. Mussolini has decided it should be done every five years. In 1931 the population of Italy was 41,176,671. The birth rate is calculated at 40,000 annually. Mussolini aims at a population of 60,000,000 by 1950.

Dog Swims 36 Hours In Bottom of Well

Rock Castle, Va., April 20 (AP).—Kay, 5-year-old setter, yesterday won a 36-hour battle against death from drowning in the bottom of a well.

The dog, who has a wide reputation as a hunter in Goochland and Powhatan Counties, was lifted from the 15 feet of water in the 30-foot well yesterday.

Her paws were torn and bleeding and she was very weak, but still swimming.

She had been missing since Friday night.

Retired Laborer Held In Death of 2 of Kin

Reading, Pa., April 20 (AP).—A mother and her 25-year-old daughter were shot and killed in the living room of their home tonight, and police arrested George B. Fry, 74, father-in-law and grandfather of the victims.

The dead were Mrs. Alice V. Fry, 48, and Fry's granddaughter, Dorothy, 25. Police said Fry, a retired laborer, had a pistol when they arrested him. Neighbors told detectives they heard a quarrel in the house shortly before the shooting.

Defenders Mass At Addis Ababa As People Flee

panic through this city of 80,000 terrified people.

Peasants and slaves, carrying what goods they could not load onto donkeys, camels and mules, poured out of the town into the roads winding into the western mountains.

All able-bodied men, including household servants, were rounded up and rushed into the mountain passes guarding the approaches to Addis Ababa.

Caches of obsolete rifles, once traded in for new ones, were hauled out and distributed.

1896 Cannons Commandeered.

Even brass cannons captured from the Italians in the famous Adowa battle of 1896 were pressed into service.

Addis Ababa remains the seat of government, but there were indications that the capital would be moved into the mountain ramparts of the west.

The last remaining members of the Beligan military mission, which drilled the now decimated imperial bodyguard, departed by train for the French port of Djibouti. The Ethiopians have been left to fight for their capital without foreign advice.

Large boxes containing cash from the Bank of Ethiopia were put aboard a refugee train headed for Djibouti. The bank opened this morning, but it refused to cash even drafts in British pounds sterling.

Nasibu to Fight.

Officials, after telephonic communication with Harar, beleaguered stronghold in the south, learned that the Dedjazmatch Nasibu, although heavily battered by the guns of Gen. Rudolpho Graziani, has decided to make a fighting retreat.

He will make his most desperate resistance east of Harar, where the Erroa River flows along the base of the Addis Ababa plateau escarpment.

League Plans Appeal to Italy To Grant Peace

sibility of anti-Italian action outside of the League.

Eden made his ominous declaration with great solemnity, adding: "This is not prophecy but anxiety."

Boncour, however, sparred for postponement of definite action by the Council. He emphasized that despite the failure of the Committee of Thirteen to negotiate peace the League should persist in its efforts for an amicable settlement.

Eden emphasized the gravity of Italian use of poison gas again Ethiopian warriors.

"In the opinion of the British government the alleged use of poison gas is one of the most important facts in the case since the use of poison gas against Ethiopia provides a great problem to all states holding League membership.

"If the antigas convention, signed by Italy, can be tourn up, will not our peoples living in great cities in Western Europe or less crowded areas elsewhere ask with reason what is the value of any international instrument?

"How can we have the confidence of our own folk when, if despite the most solemn protocols, they will be burned, blinded and done to death in agony?

System at Stake.

"The fate of the system of collective security is at stake. If there is to be lasting peace in the world the Covenant of the League of Nations, which is the law of nations, must be respected. If a nation can violate the Covenant with impunity how can any have confidence in international law in the future?

"Only by faith in the Covenant can we hope to ultimately establish the rule of order in a world in which aggression does not pay."

The resolution finally drafted by the Council first notes the Committee of Thirteen's failure and approves a proposal that the committee renew its appeal to the belligerents to make peace within the framework of the League.

It recalls that Ethiopia accepted the original peace appeal and that Italy accepted it in principle. The resolution regrets that the latest reports of the committee failed and it regrets that war is continuing in East Africa under conditions necessitating the continuance of sanctions.

And it appeals to Italy to make peace in view of the dangers implied in the European situation. The resolution reaffirms the antigas and other humanitarian conventions as still binding on both belligerents.

Baron Aloisi objected to the indirect condemnation of Italy's use of poison gas and succeeded in obtaining a modification so that the resolution also indirectly condemns Ethiopian atrocities.

Defending Italy's proposals for peace negotiations, Aloisi said, "no government has ever given the League proof of good will comparable with that of the Italian government, which remained in the League even after the denial of justice."

He denied that Italy refused to discuss peace.

"My government accepted the proposal to negotiate in the spirit of entire sincerity," he asserted.

He pointed out that the Ethiopians demanded the League Committee of Thirteen for Conciliation recognize Italy's failure to negotiate even before the Italian delegation arrived at Geneva.

"The Ethiopian delegation therefore was responsible, by its own admission, by coming here with the advance decision not to negotiate."

2-Lb. Baby No Longer Fed With Eye-Dropper

Norwood, Mass., April 19 (AP).—Norwood Hospital's smallest baby, which weighed 2 pounds at birth, left the eye-dropper feeding class today to become a real bottle-fed child.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Baker, of Walpole, was born last Monday, but not until yesterday did Dr. Thomas H. O'Toole reveal its size.

The girl is kept in a hot room into which only attending nurses may enter. Since birth, Dr. O'Toole said, the baby has gained 11 ounces.

On the Air Today

The Public Enemy No. 1 of the radio writer appears next Sunday in his usual spring bow. Daylight saving time!

Yessir, the change of that one hour in time (let's see, now, is it one hour earlier or later?) will cause little Willie to miss the exploits of Dan Doodleberry, the daring diver; mother to miss one week's installment of her favorite serial, and otherwise interfere with the peaceful and entirely satisfactory schedules of the winter months.

The time becomes effective, note ye, next Sunday. Programs you have been hearing at 8 in the evening will be on your radio at 7; 9 o'clock programs at 8 and so on, with much of the dance music heard in the cold weather months after midnight no longer being aired. WJSV already has announced its intention of closing down at midnight.

As for the poor fellow who makes up radio time schedules! Every program announcement relating to the networks comes from New York, where they eat Daylight Saving on their pancakes every morning with great gusto. And every announcement gives the hour of the program in a different brand of time than we know down here. I'll try to get them straight for you.

Some time ago Wells Church, C. B. S. program boss in Washington, forecast a brilliant air future for Maybelle Jennings, widely known to Washingtonians for her newspaper columns of recent years. From a modest beginning, Miss Jennings has progressed from a sustaining period to a sponsored quarter-hour twice weekly at WJSV—and now comes word that she soon will begin a sustaining period on the Columbia net. The next—and ultimate, of course—step is a sponsor on the network.

There is no secret being made of the fact that Ben Bernie and his orchestra set a new record in the form of cash at the window in his recent week's stand at the Fox. That's something for Rudy Vallee to shoot at. Vallee comes to the Fox in the relatively near future.

NEXT time you step into a liquor store or up to a bar look closely!

You'll see that some whiskey bottles bear GREEN stamps, some RED ones, some BLUE, and others YELLOW.

What do these different colored stamps mean?

The RED stamp means that the special American revenue tax has been paid. The product is legal.

The BLUE and YELLOW stamps identify the whiskey as a product of Canada.

But the GREEN stamp—it gives a gold mine of information to the consumer!

It is the Bottled in Bond stamp of the United States Government—the only stamp which identifies made-in-America Bottled in Bond whiskey!

And no other whiskey in the world has to meet such a stiff set of specifications!

That GREEN stamp means the whiskey in that bottle has met the drastic requirements of United States law as to full 100 proof, as to a full four years' aging in charred oak barrels, and as to freedom from the addition of younger whiskies or spirits.

French cognac may be bottled at 80 proof; Scotch whiskey at 86 proof, and Canadian whiskey may be bottled in bond as low as 90 proof.

United States bottled in bond whiskey must be absolutely straight.

Scotch whiskey may be a blend of a number of distillations. Canadian law permits the addition up to 10 per cent of either spirits or younger whiskey to make up for evaporation during the aging period. United States law grants no such concessions!

The GREEN stamp is proof of bottled in bond whiskey. The National Distillers emblem is your insurance of fine bottled in bond whiskey.

Art Over The Counter.

"When Americans begin standing in line outside the art museum, it's something to cheer about," said a New York paper in a recent editorial discussing the crowds attending the Van Gogh exhibition. In this case it may be suggested that part of the interest was kindled by interest in Van Gogh himself. So perhaps a better criterion of a developing artistic appreciation is the plan put into effect this week by the sponsors of Washington's second annual Independent Art Exhibit.

It is one thing for the man in the street to view art in the galleries; it is another to make it his own. The feeling has been all too general that art is something remote from the lives of those with modest means. This short-sightedness has worked not only to the detriment of the artist, but has resulted in homes being cluttered with poor prints and cheap copies of pictures adjudged worthy by someone else.

The pleasure of exercising one's own selective taste, and the thrill of owning an original are therefore known only to a few. It is for the majority who have missed this satisfaction that eight Washington stores have this year made over 800 original pictures accessible and available. The prices start at nominal figures and the selection ranges from oil, water color, crayon and charcoal to lithographs, etchings, miniatures and pencil sketches.

The painter, someone has said, "makes us know better, when we see it painted, that which we have seen and passed, unseeing, a hundred times." But unfortunately he has been finding it more and more difficult to reach his public. The aim of the various merchants taking part in this exhibit is to create a normal meeting ground or market. The ideal, of course, would be for art to become a staple commodity with a definite mercantile appeal.

In this way only can contemporary artists, deprived of the patronage of a past day and unable to cope with present economic conditions, hope to survive without Federal aid. The artist and the merchant are doing their part. It remains for Washingtonians to appreciate the full value of this pleasant, as well as practical and socially desirable opportunity.

No Economy In Peril To Life.

Congressmen who are willing to vote billions for relief, without even allocating funds for specific purposes, are often surprisingly reluctant to appropriate the relatively small sums needed to raise the efficiency of long-established branches of the Government service. This tendency to discriminate against the permanent establishments, and to achieve minor economies at their expense, threatens to increase the hazards of life at sea by depriving the Department of Commerce of funds needed to maintain an adequate steamboat inspection service.

Director Weaver, of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection, recently told the House Appropriations Committee that a shortage of personnel made it impossible to undertake nearly 9,000 inspections and re-inspections that ought to have been made last year. He also stated that the floating equipment of the bureau was in such bad condition that it would be condemned if it were in private use. Nevertheless, the Director of the Budget cut the $800,000 increase, requested to build up the inspection service, to a mere $36,000—a figure subsequently raised to about $200,000 by the House Appropriations Committee.

A number of recent disasters have emphasized the shocking inadequacy of the present inspection service. It cannot be improved simply by passing new safety laws placing insupportable burdens upon an overworked and underpaid staff. It is not only a false but a heartless sort of economy that considers a small immediate saving more important than insurance against needless loss of life and property at sea.

The Department of Commerce is also greatly concerned about the numerous cases of reported insubordination and inefficiency among the crews of American vessels. Rigorous enforcement of safety laws and regulations are highly important, but competent and disciplined officers and crews are after all the first line of defense in times of danger.

A Congress that has made a great display of inquisitorial zeal ought not to begrudge the time needed to investigate this aspect of the safety problem. An official inquiry is urgently needed to establish the causes of the growing unrest among crews, and to lay the basis for an intelligent program of action.

"A Betrayer Of Liberties."

In 1629 the English Parliament resolved that "if any merchant or person whatsoever shall voluntarily yield or pay" subsidies not granted by Parliament "he shall likewise be reputed a betrayer of the liberties of England and an enemy to the same."

It seems a far cry from the tactics which cost Charles I his head to those of the Black lobby committee. Nevertheless, there is a spiritual kinship between the "divine right" king who demanded private contributions in order to defy Parliament and the committee members who are now considering an appeal for private contributions after the House has refused to vote funds for fighting legal proceedings against their activities.

Control over the public purse strings—that is, the right to grant or withhold money needed to finance governmental activities—should be the most jealously guarded prerogative of legislative bodies. Personal governments, whether those of absolute monarchs or dictators of the modern type, can only exist when this control is surrendered. Since seventeenth-century England knew that, it should be apparent to twentieth-century America. It is therefore the more incredible that a Senate committee can seriously contemplate asking private citizens to provide the funds that Congress has formally withheld.

It would show contempt for basic principles of representative government if the lobby committee should seek to overrule a legislative prohibition by soliciting funds from private sources. If a committee could act in this fashion there would be nothing to prevent an executive department or bureau from extending its activities by similar extra-legal methods. Very little imagination is needed to realize that the whole structure of democratic government would be threatened by the establishment of such a precedent.

It is true that Congressional committees can be abolished as easily as they can be created, and obstreperous executive agencies can also be disciplined by legislative action. But at a time when representative government is everywhere threatened by dictatorships, it is essential to erect barriers against the minor but insidious invasions of legislative rights that lead imperceptibly to greater evils.

"The right of the pepole to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects against unreasonable searches and seizures" is a constitutional guarantee that would have little value if Congress were to surrender its exclusive right to control governmental financing.

Underground.

Truth can be stranger than fantastic fiction and life may be more poignant than any realistic tale. When Zola wrote his epic of the French miners, critics thought it too terrible for art. But real life is unrestrained by the most extravagant artistic canons.

In reality, men may be shut in sunken submarines and die while communicating by Morse code with those who would rescue them. In reality, frantic relief gangs may hear entombed workers tap out farewell messages upon intervening walls of solid rock. In reality, a landslide holds Floyd Collins at the mouth of Kentucky's Sand Cave, and he perishes there while half the world is following the bulletins of progress toward his liberation. All human anguish is mysterious. All life holds more or less of this mystery. But to realistic art the vital element of mystery is forbidden.

In life, moreover, plot is permitted to repeat itself. On an intensified scale the appalling drama of Floyd Collins has been plagiarized at the Moose River gold-mine of Nova Scotia. The two new owners—young men intent on restoring its productivity—enter it with an employe. Rock falls behind them—then water rises around them. For a long week, hundreds of expert miners, in violent shifts, dig madly toward the tomb. A tube is sunk; food is sent down, and medicine; the wives of the victims speak with them, even as one of the prisoners dies from his privations.

It is no wonder that man thinks of hell as underground. Though he has for untold centuries wrested wealth from subterranean darkness, the terrors of black confinement still beset the racial soul. The agony of these imprisoned Canadians is one which all can feel, not less so because it is too vivid for any verbal endeavor to describe.

Slipping.

From that day in October, 1917, when the war-weary world was first apprised of the inauguration of a Communist system of government in Russia, cynical capitalists have taken an I-told-you-so pleasure in remarking the gradual swing of the Soviets back to conventional ways of life. Theory soon faltered when put to practice, and the New Economic Policy was announced, compromising with capitalism to the extent of allowing profits under certain circumstances. More recently, "Stakhanoffism" has swept the U. S. S. R. with its rewards for individual efficiency, another concession to "bourgeois ideology."

Some months ago an American designer was invited to present a showing of American styles before the art group of the commissariat of education. It was the first time in 18 years that the Russians had admitted an interest in anything so intellectually soporific as styles and fashions. And now, today, to read between the lines of a dispatch from Leningrad, insidious counter-revolution marks more gains. Thirty theater managers are on trial charged with ticket speculation.

When dark gentlemen needing shaves and talking in husky undertones come sidling up, offering two in the fifth row center for 20 rubles, it is hard for the spirit of Marx to be proud.

Out Of Control.

Six killed, ten injured in nearby automobile accidents over the week-end: a ghastly indication that spring is here! For the past few months there had been hopes that this year might show an appreciable decrease in traffic fatalities. Impressed with the total of 116 killed locally during 1935, and forced by the unusually inclement winter to drive more carefully, the city has given promise of applying itself seriously to the solution of this problem. But now balmy weather is at hand. Henceforward weekends will find the highways jammed with carloads of pleasure-seeking people. And from now on every Monday will bring reports of dead and dying along the roadside.

In line with the rest of the country, Washington has tried laws and more laws, safety campaigns and more safety campaigns. But to little avail—the annual toll is scarcely affected. The Nation's record for 1935 was about the same as for the year previous—nearly 36,000 killed. Washington, happily, showed a slight improvement, with 19 fewer highway deaths. But this is not enough.

A suggestion, increasingly discussed, is strikingly emphasized in the current New Republic. Remarking that 3,500,000 new automobiles were poured onto American highways last year, D. H. Palmer points out that "the demand for more powerful and impressive cars" is still the major factor in design. Speed, speed, speed is the slogan. Assuredly, better brakes and improvements in other safety mechanisms have not been neglected. And today's highways are better graded, fenced and policed than they were a decade ago. But the human equation has not and, indeed, cannot be developed as easily as additional horsepower.

A driver of average intelligence and reflexes in a car traveling 35 miles an hour may be safely allowed to drive anywhere. But the same driver in a car geared to make anything up to 90 miles an hour assumes a character both suicidal and homicidal. Certainly some moral lies in the fact that many a man who would be frightened to mount a frisky colt thinks nothing of stepping into 3,000 pounds of steel and stepping up some 90 horsepower to 90 feet a second, or even faster.

Taxes And The Treasury.

The revenue act of 1935 was passed with very little aid from the Treasury. The President addressed a message to Congress indicating in broad outline the kind of taxation desired by the Administration. The Treasury furnished assorted estimates of the probable yield from various tax combinations. The Ways and Means Committee, however, was seriously handicapped by the lack of any definite tax plan or provisional draft of a bill, and the public was bewildered by the obscure and tentative character of the proposals.

The present tax measure has been hammered out with somewhat more specific suggestions from Treasury sources. But, unfortunately, the Treasury experts presented an oversimplified plan that did not stand up under close scrutiny. Furthermore, there has been a surprising lack of administrative interest in the bill slowly and painfully evolved by the Ways and Means Committee. Secretary Morgenthau has not even appeared before the committee to defend the Administration proposals or register his objections, if any, to proposed changes.

Although revenue bills originate in the lower House, it is a fundamental duty of the Treasury to try to bring tax legislation into conformity with the fiscal policies of the Administration by offering advice and making specific recommendations. The aloof attitude of Secretary Morgenthau is, therefore, open to serious criticism. By neglecting obvious opportunities to express his views he is evading a recognized responsibility of his office. No Secretary of the Treasury should be willing to encourage a suspicion that he is either indifferent to the fate of a tax bill or else apathetic regarding its importance to the country.

Nearly everyone is concerned about working for Uncle Sam. The poor are trying to get jobs with him, and the rich are trying to figure up some way to stop working for him.

Needless Destruction.

From the Atlanta Constitution.

Stressing the importance of reforestation as the best method of flood control, Joseph C. Kircher, regional forester in charge of the southern region of the Federal Forest Service, points out that while the South is "not a section of the country where the most destructive floods originate, large flood damage is caused from time to time . . . by the overflow of streams in the Southern pine States ranging from North Carolina to Texas."

Much of this destruction could be eliminated if Americans gave the same attention to the vitally important matter of reforestation as do the people of other nations. Because Nature has been so lavish in supplying us with trees, we have cut and destroyed until now we are having to pay the price.

Local Insanity Proposal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I call your attention to a double railroading program that is being forced upon the long-suffering denizens of this District of Chaos? I refer to the current bill to provide for changes in lunacy proceedings for Washington.

According to the present law, alleged insane persons are tried before a jury, whereas, if the proposed resolution should be enacted, the suspect must be tried by two doctors and a lawyer salaried for that purpose. It should be obvious, even to a Congressman, that the opportunity offered for disposing of people that are in the way will be greatly increased. It is much easier and cheaper to buy—or rent—two doctors and a lawyer, who are steadily on the job, than to influence the tender mercies of juries, selected for special occasions. Perhaps the most iniquitous feature of the new measure is that the suspect may be summoned for trial on a day's notice, or even without any notice at all.

The second railroading feature appears in the haste with which the measure is being forced through Congress. Thus far, our dictators have refused to grant public hearings on this important matter. If it had not been for the alertness of friends of justice this bill would have been oiled through both branches of our noble legislative body. In the name of victims of such raidings, we demand that the public be informed of conditions and be allowed to express their views in properly conducted hearings.

"Where Are The Sisters?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the President's speech in Baltimore last Monday evening, wherein he stated "Our working population increases every year both because of population increase and because more and more women are working for wages. This is as it should be," I have been listening for a chorus of "Hurrahs" from the organized women of the country, but in vain. Where are the sisters who are so quick with their response when attacks are made on their right to work for wages? A champion of these rights has appeared in no less a person than that of the President of the United States, and so far as this correspondent has been able to discern, there has not been a peep out of the organized sisterhood.

There has never been any question in my mind as to the President's attitude in this matter, but to have him state it so clearly and effectively, and in such a gathering as the youth of the country, is, in my humble opinion, the greatest thing that has happened for women since the depression began and the movement gained impetus to force them out of paid employment.

Presidential Trends.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will the early two-term tradition overcome the later one-term rotation in office trend in the coming election? Since universal manhood suffrage came in with the Jacksonians, only a few Presidents have won second consecutive terms—Jackson himself, Lincoln, Grant, McKinley and Wilson. The elected Presidents defeated for second consecutive terms are more numerous; some of them were not accorded even second nominations.

In the past few years the trend looms strongly in favor of the notion that the President should be merely a representative man. The Presidency becomes a kaleidoscope. The veteran of experience seems undesirable. Let the President come fresh from the people.

The high commands of each great party should look carefully into this struggle between the tradition and the new trend.

There is another element that the high command of the Republican party would do well to regard—the fact that in the entire history of the Presidency no man has ever been elected who was not well known to the great majority of the voters as either the bitter public enemy of some President or as his warm personal and political friend. To this there has been no exception whatever. The people have never elected an unknown man. In a few instances each candidate has been well known.

The notion in some quarters that a presidential candidate can be successfully built up has no warrant in American political history.

The Unemployment Problem.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Roosevelt's critics say, "Let business alone that it may take care of unemployment." Business has never taken care of unemployment, but with increasing population, industrialization of the Nation, and the complexities of our economic order, unemployment has steadily increased. What assurance have we that business will do something that it has never done, especially since the passing of time aggravates the problem?

When the shadows of depression gathered in 1929, Mr. Hoover was certainly letting business alone, yet many businesses turned out every man and woman who could not be profitably retained and used conditions as an excuse to rid their institutions of many old persons who had dedicated most of their lives to these institutions. They said that nobody had a vested right in his job. The fact that homes, morals and even souls were concerned did not matter. Profits and dividends did matter. What assurance have we that the same thing will not happen when the next depression comes along?

Unemployment detracts mightily from the Nation's purchasing power; it breeds discontent, disease and crime, and is a molder of perverted humanity. It's baneful effect even encompasses those who are employed. What to do with it is a question America must answer. And the question cannot be answered by referring to what somebody said who lived 150 years ago when land could be had for the asking and Nature's bounty from the forest was almost sufficient to support. It cannot be answered by looking backward; it must be answered by looking forward. This Nation cannot endure half employed and half unemployed.

And "Plunderers."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No sane person objects to the improvement of the public parks, which have been neglected for years. But armies of Washingtonians not only object to but greatly resent the reckless "plundering" of beautiful places.

What on earth, for instance, has been accomplished by "leveling" the picturesque and graceful hillocks in old Franklin Square?

The idle chatter about lilac not "thriving" in Washington is absolute "bunk." They have thriven before the Brain Trust was ever heard of and will continue to do so long after the present crowd of weird politicians are forgotten.

Have Sanctions Failed?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of April 18, under the caption "Have Sanctions Failed?" propounds a question which you attempt to answer in the negative. I hope you will allow me space to adduce a few remarks intended to illustrate why the economic sanctions applied to Italy did not have the outcome that was anticipated.

You ask if the device of sanctions would "be invoked in future against some other formidable aggressor?" In your mind the term aggressor apparently connotes strength. Why discriminate between strong and weak nations? (For the simple reason that it is easy to restrain a weak aggressor.—Editor.) In the militaristic sense Germany is still far from formidable, yet she felt spurred on, at the risk of sanctions, to violate the Locarno pact. Whence does her renewed vigor arise?

Again you assert that "collective action cannot be dismissed as a failure merely because it has proved ineffective against Il Duce's determination." You admit, therefore, that determination is a vital factor in international relations. The proof of the pudding is that Mussolini was not deterred by threats from the League of Nations. He went boldly ahead with his plans, and when economic sanctions were meted out to Italy, he took up with gusto the gage thrown down by England.

Another strong reason for the failure of sanctions in the instant case, evidently overlooked by the League, was moral rather than economic. When a nation can follow a leader whose character has imbued it with his personal dynamism, when the national ego has been fired by imagination that springs from deeply rooted atavistic forces, then perhaps we can begin to understand why the spirit of the Risorgimento was reborn in Italy.

As the various tribes and races that make up the geographic entity named Ethiopia gradually come under the civilizing influence of Rome, they will find their new masters infinitely more benevolent than the Negus and his vassals. After the lapse of several years during which the benefits of modern sanitation and hygiene, improved agricultural methods and a modicum of enlightened education shall have lifted these peoples from abject misery, perhaps public opinion in the United States will grant Il Duce his due.

Meanwhile the campaign in East Africa draws to its inevitable close years before the alloted time predicted by the strategists, and the loosely knit kingdom of Haile Selassie crumbles before the onrushing Italian legions. You marvel yourself at this feat of arms, stating that "from the purely military viewpoint the achievement commands respect." If the commanders in the field overcame "formidable obstacles," be it remembered that they succeeded because they had the support at home of a government willing to suffer moral ignominy and of a populace ready to undergo dire sacrifices.

GUY d'AULBY.
Washington, April 19.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Has the League of Nations failed? It takes both courage and faith to assert, in the face of the present outlook, that the League still abides as the world's chief anchor in the storm of threatened war. No such reform or radical attempt so sweeping in its purposes and implications to the peoples of our world could, unless by miracle, succeed to the satisfaction of all concerned in 17 years of operation.

Just one year ago, I sat with other Americans about a table at Geneva and heard a representative of the League of Nations speak in substance as follows: "We shall be obliged, I fear, to yield to Italy some of Ethiopia in order to prevent a widespread war in Europe. The sacrifice must be made at some point. Should we plunge Europe into another war, by using every means possible to stop Mussolini, even to closing the Suez Canal, or hold him up as a truce-breaker by combined judgment, and let him act under the odium of it with the world's scorn? The League does not exist as a physical but as a moral force.

"Take your own Constitution as an example of a working proposal: You have many different States under it, but they speak the same language; they belong largely to the same race; they are isolated by the oceans from contact with alien powers—yet you have had to yield to powerful sections of your country and add and then repeal amendments to your Constitution. Those who have faith in the ultimate triumph of Right, must see that the League of Nations was an inspiration from Him from whom cometh every good gift." J. O. KNOTT.

The Post Impressionist

A Modern Crusader.

Post Office, Tuesday.

WE WERE first warned about it through a letter from Donald Porter Geddes, of the Columbia University Press. He wrote:

"Dr. McNeal was in our office the other day and read your column on his new book. He went out chuckling. I imagine you'll be hearing from him."

A professorial chuckle is always ominous.

Besides, this Dr. McNeal is Dr. Edgar Holmes McNeal, professor of European History at Ohio State University. He has produced a lot of books, but the one Don Geddes referred to was a translation—with learned commentaries—of the ancient "Conquest of Constantinople" by Sir Robert of Clari. And, despite Professor McNeal (of Columbus, Ohio) and Father Graham (of Washington, D. C.), we had ventured, you know, an opinion that the Fourth Crusade, however lofty its original purpose, degenerated into nothing but a raid of Christians upon Christians—the sake of loot alone!

Well, pretty soon along came the following note, addressed collectively to the Editorial Department of this newspaper and immediately turned over to us by the austere C. C.:

"I have seen a Post-Impressionist Column dealing with my new book . . . I shall be very greatly obliged if you will tell me how I can secure a copy of the article."

More ominous still! Had we laid ourselves open to a suit at law—for libel upon the late Doge of Venice and later Marquis of Montferrat?

Nevertheless, we wouldn't abandon our historical convictions. Fearlessly we complied with the Ohio request. We even sent copies of our subsequent disclosures regarding the Fourth Crusade. And now Professor McNeal, though eschewing the law, argues his academic case against us.

* * *

"Thank you," says a missive just received from him, "for sending me the clippings from your Column. I appreciate very highly your skill in making an interesting story out of the material.

"As to the points at issue, your critic (Father Graham) is justified, on the whole, in appealing to Villehardouin and to Marzial's summary. There can be no question of the superiority of Villehardouin's testimony over that of Robert of Clari or any other contemporary chronicler. I think it is necessary to accept, in its main outlines, his explanation of the diversion (of the Crusade, from the Holy Land) to Constantinople; namely:

"That, at Zara, the leaders realized the impoverishment of the host and seized on the offer of young Alexius (the offer of military help against the Saracens in return for help in seating him upon the Byzantine throne) as a way out of their financial impasse;

"And that they (the Crusaders) really expected, not only to enrich themselves at Constantinople, but also to be able to go with the Crusade from there under much better circumstances and after only a short delay—they did not foresee the troubles they were to encounter at Constantinople or anticipate the necessity of capturing the city.

"This applies to the French leaders.

"As to the Doge and Venetians, I am afraid we shall have to abandon as apocryphal the tale that the Venetians were already bound by a treacherous engagement with the Sultan of Egypt to turn the Crusade away from his land. On the other hand, they were undoubtedly glad to use the Crusading expedition to establish incidentally a protege of their own—young Alexius—on the throne of Constantinople . . . It is quite likely also that the Emperor Philip (Philip of Swabia, the brother-in-law of Alexius), welcomed this chance to restore his brother-in-law and instructed the Marquis (of Montferrat) to use his efforts to bring this about.

"As for the Marquis himself, Robert's story appears to be a popular tale afloat in the camp and reflecting, in distorted form, a real fact; that he had interests and ambitions of his own in the Greek Empire and, for this reason, worked to persuade the leaders to undertake the expedition to Constantinople. I believe this is a fair statement of the famous 'division problem.'"

* * *

But, at the end of the professor's letter there appears one concession: "You put your finger very adroitly on the special value of Robert's testimony to the greed of the Crusaders and the lure of booty—though perhaps this should not be regarded as a primary motive."

So our main contention remains untouched. Whereas those Crusaders set out to free the Holy Land from the infidel, they never did anything except pillage Christian Zara and Christian Constantinople.

P. S.: There is a rumor current that the Post-Impressionist may reveal his identity. We don't believe the story, but we'd be glad if it proved correct, for there have been times when we pondered hard—and ineffectively—upon the problem of who conducted this Column.

Fair Enough

The Irish Sick

Mr. Leo T. McCauley, the Consul General of the Irish Free State, has disagreed with some particulars of my recent dispatches from London regarding the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes, which thus far has yielded $46,000,000 for the care of the sick poor in a nation of 3,000,000 souls, many of whom are neither sick nor poor. We are not very far apart, however, on the fact that there is such a sweep, and I am sure Mr. McCauley will agree that this enterprise is a lottery and that the laws of the friendly Republic of the United States forbid the sale of tickets on the same in this country.

We may be prigs about it, but that is our law, and when nations are friends they generally try to respect each other's idiosyncrasies. The Irish Free State, for example, has a curious little aversion to the importation and consumption of cocaine, and the American representatives in Ireland would be sure to do everything in their power to suppress any attempt on the part of any Americans to smuggle cocaine into the Free State and sell it to the people. On our part we regard tickets as a habit-forming drug which have had a bad effect on the morals of the people. Possibly both cocaine and lottery tickets have been maligned in these laws and they may be just the things that people need to bring out their best qualities; but the law is the law and we are slaves to the statutes.

This being so, I am sure that Mr. McCauley is doing everything in his power as the accredited representative of the Irish nation to discourage the sale of tickets on the Irish hospitals sweep in the United States. It is a difficult task to be sure, because the British, who used to buy more tickets than any other people, have imposed absolute silence on the lottery ballyhoo in their press, movies and radio, and certain promoters in Dublin have turned to this country as a substitute market. They run advertisements not exactly inviting American citizens to invest their money in lottery tickets contrary to American law but warning them against counterfeit tickets—which is a very sly way of calling the lottery to the attention of our people and teaching them how to recognize the legitimate tickets.

A curious phase of the problem is, however, that the Irish hospitals sweep is not immoral or illegal in the eyes of the Irish law but is, in fact, an official concern of the Free State government.

Naturally, the American people and the Government, too, feel sorry for the sick poor of Ireland and hope they get better real soon. But in that respect we do have some troubles of our own and the mails are full of appeals for money for American societies which endeavor to provide iodine, quinine and splints for persons who don't feel well and can't afford hospital treatment. Considering that the Irish hospitals already have been credited with $16,000,000 and assuming that not more than one-fourth of the population are sick poor hospital cases, it may be reckoned that the sick poor of Ireland already have a backing of $81 and some cents per head to see them through their megrims. I don't believe our own sick poor are as well supported.

* * * * *

However, the important thing is the principle, and I am certain that Mr. McCauley as the representative of his government among the morally weak but sincerely friendly people of the United States will leave no stone unturned, as the fine old saying goes, to exclude Irish sweepstake tickets from this country.

Yet, considering the great traffic in these tickets in the United States it sometimes seems that he is not taking advantage of his opportunities to shield from contamination that which we sometimes have the nerve to call our moral character. The Irish postoffice handles the lottery mail, which is legally barred but not effectively excluded from our mails, and the Irish government with its firm supervisory authority over the sweep should be able to prevent all but the merest trickle of smuggled tickets into our country and the merest trickle of American money into the pool. Yet the traffic grows and grows and our morals presumably are receiving fresh infections of galloping decay from this source.

I do not personally believe it is as serious as all that, but in view of Mr. McCauley's interest in my London dispatch about the sweep I just thought I ought to show a similar interest in Mr. McCauley's letter. It looks like the beginning of a pleasant correspondence.

Rainbow Veterans Seek Ballot Here

The Washington chapter of the Rainbow Division Veterans yesterday made public letters to the Senate and House District Committees complaining about the present voteless status of Washington residents.

"For the voteless citizens of the District, living here is like residing in a glorified hades," the letters said.

Virginia Tourist Trade Due to Boom, Hall Says

Wilbur C. Hall, chairman of the Virginia Conservation and Development Commission, yesterday said travel agency executives who toured the State last week predicted "a great future for Virginia as a tourist center," according to the Associated Press.

Hall added his own prediction that "the current year will be the greatest yet of Virginia's increasing tourist business."

The Road to Ruin

Subserviency Of Congress Blamed For Plight Of Nation As Citizens Note Little But Blind And Prodigal Lawmaking.

By Hilding Siversen.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Kansas City, Mo.

The radio address of former Senator James Reed at Kansas City the other night contained a reference to Congress which, if intemperate, is still significant. He compared subservient Congressmen to spaniels trailing at the heels of the Executive.

It is safe to say that the present status of Congress, if we are expected to regard it as a distinct, integral, effective organism, is at the very lowest point in American history. Under the New Deal regime it has stultified itself and supinely slumped into a most unenviable role.

It is improbable that many Congressmen realize the low opinion in which they are coming to be held by a large section of the American people. Some members of the two houses are vain and complacent and love to consider themselves members of "the greatest deliberative body on earth." It would be something of a shock to them to realize that they are considered not merely neutral and impotent, but positively dangerous to the public welfare. When Congress adjourns a sigh of relief goes up from the country at large.

American People Beginning To Wonder.

Little by little the knowledge has percolated into the minds of the mass of American people that a great number if not a majority of the members of Congress support measures that they know are dangerous to public welfare, merely because they are commanded to do so by the Executive, or because it is the easiest way out. It is getting to be quite a bit of scandal out in the small towns and Rotary Club forums and schoolhouse symposiums that a large number of national legislators, even those of the Democratic label, privately curse the New Deal and al its works, and then tamely vote in favor of it. It is getting to be noised around that the national legislators are voting for measures necessitating appropriations that they know full well cannot be met by revenues.

Any 10-year-old boy in the fifth grade knows that you cannot keep spending two dollars for every dollar you take in without ruination. He knows that you cannot pass laws providing for a soldier's bonus or relief or great governmental projects or huge military establishments, lacking means for raising the money, withouet making a fool of yourself, or exposing yourself to the contempt of the people.

This is not a partisan matter. Republicans have been almost as bad as Democrats in this respect. Most of them have fatuously joined the poltroonish stampede to spend, spend, spend, without providing means for meeting the expenditure. They light-heartedly tread the road to ruin, thinking only of their own immediate political prospects, realizing that a continuation of such a course means the destruction of the American Government. Such a spectacle has never been in the United States before. It is a Bacchanalian orgy of nihilism and futility. "After us the deluge."

Legislators Seen Ignorant Of Problems.

A group of thoughtful business men in a small Middle Western town were discussing this topic, which is becoming more and more familiar, and the general opinion was about as follows:

The machinery of government in Washington is now the most prodigious thing of its kind ever seen in the world. Nothing approaching it in magnitude and complexity has ever before existed. It is now so huge that it has gotten entirely beyond control. There is not a man in the United States, much less in Washington, who understands how to conduct it or make it go. It is too unwieldy and complicated. It cannot be co-ordinated. Legislators in Washington may know something about one subject, but they have become physically unable to grasp any appreciable or important amount of knowledge on all the important departments of government.

Most of the legislators are dismally ignorant on such subjects as the farm problem, or the coal industry, or the tariff, and they vote without even the possibility of having informed themselves on the subject, the usual process being to follow the command of the department head which will administer the prososed law, with possibly some suggestion from the floor leader or some committee chairman.

This is growing into a fairly general opinion. It is conceded that a greater number of Congressmen are inherently patriotic and well-meaning, but the task has gotten beyond their control and they have been dizzily drifting in strange currents whose nature and portent they do not understand. Being in Washington constantly, they quickly lose their perspectives. The task immediately in front of their noses becomes large, out of proportion, and the welfare of the whole country recedes into the distant horizon like a vague dream. About the only letters or visits they receive are from special pressure groups, or organizations, which may be impressive as to size, but which are, nevertheless, small minorities of that greater public opinion representing taxpayers and the genuine muscle and brains of the country at large. They, therefore, take the path of least resistance.

Uneasiness Noted In Middle West.

It is a tragedy—this swelling of government into gigantic and uncontrollable proportions, by a process of pulling, hauling and pushing of pressure groups and pure theorists. The people are becoming uneasy. They cannot see the way out. They are almost inarticulate. Taxpayers are almost always inarticulate. But they are thinking hard. They are wondering. They are startled by the tossing around of billions. They are benumbed by the continued impacts of uncontrolled and uncontrollable legislation and bureaucratic commands which have the extra-legal and unconstitutional effect of laws.

It is going to take time for them to grasp the total drift of things. They may be able to do it before next November. In reality, they have a better instinctive perspective than the men with a few items of specialized knowledge in Washington, but they do not have the implements in their hands wherewith to correct the evils.

The jolly, light-hearted utterances as to the "new day" or the redemption of the forgotten man or the more abundant life for the underprivileged has no basis in the actual thought of the people. The writer was in a group of Middle Western farmers recently. They talked intimately, thoughtfully, frankly. They have become cynical at the white-rabbit pulling and the cheerful assumption of the New Dealers that all is well. They know the figures, and with hard-headed, practical common sense, they know the sweet nothings about "everything's going to be all right" is nothing but campaign-year palaver. They see the handwriting on the wall, the unprecedented debt coupled with unprecedented unemployment. They know that the New Deal has solved no problem. Since employment is the gauge of national welfare, they know that we are no better off now than we were on March 4, 1933. That is a matter of simple arithmetic, and everybody knows it. The relief rolls are larger than ever and besides that, we have the huge national debt and the grossly unbalanced budget.

Congress bears a great share of the blame for this unwholesome state of affairs. Congress could have prevented this situation if it had had nerve, courage, statesmanship. But it is failing miserably in its stewardship to the people.

Police Seize Six In Gambling Raid

Six men were taken to police headquarters, booked for investigation and released yesterday, when the vice squad entered a "joint" in the 1400 block of L street, armed with a warrant, charging gambling, for the arrest of an unidentified man.

Sergt. George C. Deyoe, who led the raid, said a quantity of racing slips, two telephones and an adding machine were seized. He said a United States commissioner's warrant had been obtained for a man who allegedly ran the gambling establishment. He would not divulge the name of the man sought.

When the raiders entered the six men were just loitering, Deyoe said. There was no gambling going on at the time, although the paraphernalia was seized.

Press Guardian In Government, Writers Assert

Editors Hear Mencken and Lewis at Luncheon, Hold Business Session.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 20.—The responsibilities of newspapers as guardians of good government were emphasized by two prominent journalists today at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press.

Henry L. Mencken, of the Baltimore Sun papers, declared the press constitutes the "only effective opposition" in this country, and Sir Willmott Lewis, American correspondent of the London Times, said:

"The newspapers of today are not in all lands free, but where they still have liberty and defend it—against enemies without and within—where they stand for discussion and agreement, setting themselves unbreakably against the regimentation of custom and obedience by goosestep, even the cynic may find a place for hope."

Mencken said one of the clearest duties of newspapers was to "keep a wary eye on the gentlemen who operate this great Nation, and only too often slip into the assumption that they own it."

"I don't argue here that newspapers ought always to be 'agin' the Government," he continued. "Far from it. All I argue is that they ought to be ready for it when, as and if it needs attention."

Ballot for Directors.

Following the luncheon, members of the association balloted on candidates for the board of directors, after voting to increase the board's membership from 15 to 18, and discussed a proposal to undertake an advertising program.

The three additional directors were to be chosen from member newspapers published in cities of less than 50,000 population, thus enlarging the representation of smaller newspapers on the board.

The amendment to the by-laws providing for the additional directors specified that their newspapers shall not be controlled or operated by or affiliated with any newspaper owner in a city of more than 50,000 population.

Earlier the members heard the annual reports of Kent Cooper, general manager, and the board of directors.

The luncheon and business sessions were presided over by Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press and publisher of the Washington Star.

The Associated Press meeting opened a week of newspaper activities which brought more than 500 publishers, editors and business managers from all parts of the United States and Canada to the city.

Publishers Convene Today.

Tomorrow the American Newspaper Publishers Association will begin its annual convention, continuing through Friday.

In his address Mencken referred to the editorial page as the "grandest and gaudiest failure" of the newspaper.

"It has been going downhill steadily for 50 years," he said. "No one thinks of great American editors any more; everyone thinks of great sports writers, comic artists and columnists."

The decline in the editorial page, he said, has continued despite the fact that it is the best manned page in the paper. This he blamed chiefly upon "gloomy and forbidding" typography and the tendency of editors to make their editorials impartial.

"The newspaper is not only a news-monger," he declared, "it is also a critic. That it may be a bad one is beside the point; nine-tenths of all critics are bad ones. The essential thing is that it is the only critical agency of any genuine competence and influence that is left in the American scheme of things."

When they have something to say about the Government, whether in challenge or commendation, he contended, "they ought to say that something in type legible at a distance of at least 6 inches, and under headlines suitable to the importance of the subject, and in a place less depressing than the funeral parlor of the editorial page."

District Man Faces Trial in Maryland

Malcolm Turner, 27, of the 1700 block of Riggs street northwest, was turned over to Maryland authorities yesterday to stand trial on a charge of assaulting a 20-year-old girl Friday night in Four Corners, Md.

Turner waived extradition when arraigned before Judge Robert E. Mattingly for preliminary hearing. He was released to be taken back.

According to information furnished police by the victim of the alleged attack, Turner, a collector for a local clothing firm, called on her Friday to collect a bill.

Turner was arrested Saturday by Detective Sergts. Joseph Shimon and Guy Rone. He was taken to the Third Precinct, where he was later identified by the girl.

Turner will be given a preliminary hearing in Montgomery County police court at Rockville, Md., Friday. He denied the girl's charges.

Conferees Split On Rural Lighting

By the Associated Press.

Disagreement on three "vital points" was reported yesterday by Senator Norris (Republican), Nebraska, after a meeting of Senate and House conferees on rural electrification legislation.

The bill by Norris would empower the Federal Government to lend money to enable farmers to electrify their farms.

Norris outlined the disagreements as follows:

1. The House measure would stipulate that interest be at no less than 3 per cent; the Senate bill provides that the interest rate shall not exceed 3 per cent.

2. The House measure would allow loans to private companies; the Senate bill would not.

3. The House proposal does not carry a provision in the Senate measure requiring that job holders be selected on a nonpolitical basis.

Norris said no further conferences are expected for at least ten days.

Text of Address by Sir Wilmott Lewis

The text of the address by Sir Willmott Lewis, American correspondent for the London Times, at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press, follows:

This year the Associated Press has chosen to draw two men from the writing craft to be its speakers on this occasion, and I am honored to be one of them. In the presence of so large and distinguished a group of publishers and editors it might be fitting that I adopt what Sydney Smith said bishops desired of their curates—a "dropping-down deadness of manner"—but I make no pretence to assume it. We know that our press is free, and this afternoon let us believe that every writer such as I am is also free, to give his testimony "without fear or favor, affection or ill-will," as the English oath demands of a witness. I shall not burden you with praise of yourselves as individuals, or with eulogy of the great organization (the greatest of its kind known to me) which you collectively represent. The cat has looked at the king, and his majesty long since found favor in the sight of the cat.

We have been told that the duty of the newspaper is to comfort the afflicted, and to afflict the comfortable. I heartily agree. Today, when economic science (so-called) seems unable to grapple with the problems of the poor, when the comfortable among us are tempted to consider their own security as the first and indispensable element of general progress, when the question of all questions—within nations and between nations—is whether the remedies for the ills we suffer may not be as unbearable as the ills themselves—today, if ever, the injunction of Finley Peter Dunne should be remembered.

Trilobites Treated New Ideas Harshly

Let me offer you an apologue, borrowed from an English scholar. Once upon a time, much longer than 6,000 years ago, the trilobites—small marine organisms now extinct—were the only people that had eyes, and they were only just beginning to use them, and some even of the trilobites had as yet no signs of coming sight. So that the utmost they could know was that they were living in darkness, and that perhaps there was such a thing as light. But at last one of them, more advanced than his fellows, happened to come to the surface of the water in the daytime and he saw the sun.

So he went down and told the others that in general the world was light, but that there was one great light which caused it all. Then they killed him for disturbing the commonwealth, but later they came to consider it impious to doubt that in general the world was light, and that there was one great light which caused it all. And they had great disputes about the manner in which they had come to know this. Afterward another of them, advanced beyond his fellows, happened to come to the top of the water in the night time, and saw the stars. So he went down and told the others that in general the world was dark, but that nevertheless there was a great number of little lights in it. Then they slew him also, for maintaining false doctrines. But from that time there was division among them, some maintaining one thing, and some the other.

When all could see, there was perhaps an end of the matter, though I do not know whether at any time all trilobites could see. Nor do I know whether the peoples of the English-speaking nations, who are lifted to a level incredibly above that of the trilobites—and with whom I am exclusively concerned this afternoon—can yet see with that sight which is better than bodily vision.

Toleration Today Found A Hard Discipline

It is true that no longer, as once, do we kill the bearers of contradictory or unwelcome tidings, but the toleration we now practice is a hard discipline, a lesson to be learned anew with each generation. This brings me to the press, which is the life of all of us, and it is of the press as the servant of toleration, and thus as the servant of democracy, that I would speak here. We must put toleration and democracy together, for without the one, the other would be unworkable. And we must put toleration first, for until it had been learned, and institutions had been made (as were yours) or adapted (as in my country) to its uses and enlargement, democracy could not live. We know that absolutism and intolerance go together, but do we always or enough remember that power, even though it be short of absolutism, is the enemy of toleration? Having asked the question, let me turn to a wise and understanding student of the minds and conduct of men, Graham Wallas, who described the position of the press as "now the most insoluble problem of democracy."

Why? Because, said Wallas, as long as his newspapers pay, and the telephone from his house to the editorial offices is in working order, the owner of a group of papers has more absolute irresponsibility in the use of great power than any other living man. If he is to use his power in a way helpful to the community he must aim at the two virtues, veracity and seriousness, that is to say, the more obvious virtue of taking trouble to secure that his belief is well-founded. But nothing in his position, says Wallas, or in the qualities necessary to reach that position, encourages either of these virtues; and the anonymous writers whom he hires to carry out his orders have neither the personal independence of artists nor the public responsibility of experts.

I am speaking as an Englishman of England, and I say to you in all seriousness that Graham Wallas was guilty of no exaggeration. There are in the conditions of English life the elements which make this concentration of power possible—a little island, thickly populated, provided with all the modern agencies of distribution, where circulation can be, and is, national rather than regional.

Newspaper Ownership 'Plutocracy' Suggested

This has brought into existence a sort of plutocracy of newspaper ownership, metropolitan and provincial, such as I do not believe to exist anywhere else. And it leads me gravely to doubt whether the freedom of the press, in that sense of the phrase which makes it precious to us, can without serious adjustment be long allowed to cover such a condition. Remember that the day on which Macaulay pointed to the reporters' gallery and declared that there would be found a fourth estate is infinitely remote from us. The press is no longer fourth in the hierarchy of national powers—it is hardly less than the first in the sweep and continuity of its influence. It is "affected with a public interest" to a degree greater even than a common carrier, for it does not transport the bodies or the goods of men, it plays ceaselessly on the minds of men. "Few episodes in recent history are more poignant," said Walter Lippmann in a little book he published in 1920, "than that of the British Prime Minister, sitting at the breakfast table with that morning's paper before him, protesting that he cannot do the sensible thing in regard to Russia because a powerful newspaper publisher has drugged the public." And Mr. Lippmann has my heartfelt, my passionate agreement when he adds that the incident is a photograph of the supreme danger which confronts popular government, because the news is the chief source of opinion by which government in democratic countries must proceed.

I feel it to be peculiarly fitting that I should speak of these things here, because I am addressing the members of a great organization whose purpose is not private profit, but the provision of a service of news, foreign and domestic, which shall be not only full but utterly impartial, and whose record is a source of justifiable pride. I have spoken of my own country, and have no desire or intent to invite comparison with yours. But this I can say—I hope without indiscretion—that both in England and the United States the danger which confronts what we call freedom of the press is not chiefly from without, for that we can meet, but from within. It is, as I see it, a danger which grows with the growth and with the increasing integration of the newspaper system—the danger that the freedom which makes us great and useful may make some among us too great, that individuals may acquire a power which (if the freedom we demand is to be ours) they cannot be prevented from harnessing in the service of personal ambition rather than of the community from which their strength flows. We are all of us, each in his place and degree, among the guardians of freedom, but "quid custodiet ipsos custodes?" asked the stern old Roman—who shall guard your own guards? I beg you earnestly to believe that these doubts are not mine alone, but that they preoccupy the minds of innumerable men within my own craft, which is that of writer, not publisher.

Fears Exercise of Will Instead of Judgment

Something of what I and my colleagues mean is to be found in one of Alexander Hamilton's Federalist papers, on the subject of the judicature, where he dwelt upon the possibility that judges might "exercise will instead of judgment."

He could not see what the press was to become, but he was speaking prophetically to the most powerful among us. Nor, when he wrote, was there anything to show him that, in a country chiefly agricultural, and whose industries he was anxious to advance, there would arise a corporate structure so vast and so potent as one day to demand no less than a re-examination of the ultimate problem of political economy—the problem of the relation of private property to public welfare. There has never lived, and there will never be born, a man wise and good enough to be intrusted with the irresponsible power over human thought, and the action that follows thought, which ownership of many newspapers conveys in the modern world, and the freedom to exercise it in the service of his own interests. To say that his interests might also be those of the community is to say something which might be episodically true, but can not be generally true, it is to forget human pride and human weakness, and to break with history.

Responsibility of Press In International Relations

To speak as I have spoken is, I frankly admit, to raise more argumentative hares than can be run down in a year of discussion, but so it has always been when such questions as the rights of property or the uses of freedom have been raised. Even if there were no such problem as I have suggested there would be others as compelling, chief among which I should put the part played, or rightly to be played, by the press in the relationship of nations. There was a time when peoples did not like each other because they were strangers. How is it that today they do not like each other when there is so amazing a daily diffusion of international consciousness? Is that that they know too much, or that they do not yet know enough, of each other? Here, to a degree which would make a man humble, responsibility falls on the foreign correspondent. If I may be pardoned a personal reference, I should like to say that after living in many lands, and for many years in this, I have come to see that a man's vision of a country not his own is like the reverse side of a brocade—all the threads are there, but not the subtlety of color and design. When this is so of men trained by travel and experience, how should it not be so of the myriad readers whose minds are daily divided between a hundred imperfect images, none of which can be even approximately realized? It does not appear that the thinking capacity of the job is enlarging, but it is obvious that the demands upon it multiply indefinitely, and a witty friend of mine has said that mental culture reverses the process of agriculture, and passes from the intensive to the extensive, going to seed over a wider and wider area, regardless of the fertility or infertility of the soil.

All this leads nowhere, or only to one point—that man may be smaller than his own aspirations, but should not be allowed to forget them. The press may be a daily reminder of all or some that is best in the world, and will be if it is true to a great tradition of toleration which is not the smallest part of its heritage. The newspapers of today are not in all lands free, but where they still have liberty and defend it—against enemies without and within—where they stand for discussion and agreement, setting themselves unbreakably against the regimentation of custom and of obedience by goose-step, even the cynic may find a place for hope.

Horse Show to Aid Legion Clinic Fund

A 15-class program is being arranged by Chairman F. Larmour Oyster and his committee aids for the second annual horse show of the Montgomery County Council of American Legion Posts to be held on Sunday, May 3, at Rock Creek Park, Md.

Competitions for all types of hunters, open jumpers and saddle horses, are to be carded by Oyster, well known Washington and Maryland sportsman who presented one of the outstanding shows of last season when he handled the legion's first meet.

Proceeds this year will go toward the fund which is being raised to finance the American Legion's orthopedic clinic, which will be conducted in Montgomery County April 30. It is expected that the receipts will provide a large portion of the money.

Byrns, Wife Are Honored By Two Clubs

Men's, Women's Groups of 74th Congress Give Dinner.

Mrs. Ralph Brewster, Rep. Utterback Receive; Dance Follows.

The Speaker of the House and Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns were guests of honor last night at a dinner dance given by the Seventy-Fourth Club and the Women's Seventy-Fourth Club, the first joint function of the two groups, composed of members of the Seventy-Fourth Congress and their wives. The rose room of the Hotel Washington, which was decorated with palms and flowers, and the roof garden, were the scene of the party.

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, president of the women's group, and Representative Hubert Utterback, president of the men's, received with the Speaker and Mrs. Byrns. Mrs. Byrns was dressed in a gown of light blue satin, made on simple lines and trimmed in crystal, with which she wore a corsage of sweet peas and cornflowers, the gift of the clubs. Mrs. Brewster wore white chiffon with a blended figure in rainbow shades, and a ribbon sash repeating the colors of the gown.

The table was in the shape of a horseshoe, with a garden effect in the semicircle it formed.

The United States Navy Band and Navy Orchestra, under the direction of Lieut. Charles Benter, played during the dinner and for dancing later. A program of current theatrical attractions was arranged by Representative Jack Nichols. The committee for the function included, in addition to Mrs. Brewster., Representative Utterback and Representative Nichols, Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mrs. Herron Pearson, Mrs. Orville Zimmerman, Representative Emmit O'Neal, Representative Brewster and Representative Louis C. Rabaut.

Garden Party Guests at National Cathedral

Underwood & Underwood.

At the garden party given yesterday afternoon by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, and Mrs. Freeman at the Bishop's House in the Cathedral Close were the clergy of the Washington diocese and their families. Among those present were the Rev. William L. De Vries, the Rev. Fairchild H. Butts, Mrs. Butts, Dr. A. A. McCallum and Mrs. Robert Shores, pictured to the right.

The Bishop and Mrs. Freeman received their guests on the east portico, overlooking the gardens. Tea was served at tables on the lawn. Among those who were strolling about the gardens, lovely with the first flowers of spring, were Bishop Freeman and his guests, Mrs. Z. B. Phillips, Dr. Z. B. Phillips, Miss Evelyn Mathews and Mrs. Anson P. Stokes, shown below.

Usually the Bishop and Mrs. Freeman hold this annual garden party for the diocesan clergy in May but it was given earlier this year because of their anticipated trip to the Holy Land next month.

Beauregards Here for Visit

Naval Officer and Wife Are Guests of Mrs. Munford While in Capital.

Capt. A. Toutant Beauregard, United States Navy, and Mrs. Beauregard, have arrived in Washington for a visit with the latter's mother, Mrs. Edward S. Munford, in her home on Nineteenth street.

Capt. and Mrs. Beauregard returned from Paris, where the former has been on duty as United States naval attache.

They will leave Washington on Saturday by omtor for Coronado, Calif., where they will spend a month visiting their son-in-law and daughter, Ensign and Mrs. Porter F. Dedell, and make the acquaintance of their small granddaughter, Joan Bedell.

Capt. and Mrs. Beauregard will return to the East Coast about the first of June, going to Newport, R. I., where the former will assume his duties at the War College.

Mrs. Munford also has as her guest her other daughter, Mrs. Joseph Mullally, the former Miss Norvelle Munford, of Pittsburgh, Pa., who arrived several days ago from New York, where she visited for three weeks. Mr. Mullally is expected to arrive in the Capital on Friday to spend the week-end.

Mrs. MacWhite Will Hold Final 'At Home' Today

Mrs. Michael MacWhite, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State, will entertain this afternoon in her apartment at the Shoreham at her final "at home" of the season.

Mrs. MacWhite will be assisted by Senora de Calderon, Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, Mrs. F. Ryan Duffy, Mrs. William Phillips, Mme. Sokolowska, Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr and Mrs. Harry Woodring, who will alternate at the tea table.

Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the Secretary of the Irish Legation, and her daughter, Miss Emer Brennan, also will assist Mrs. MacWhite during the afternoon.

Earl of Shrewsbury, Wife to Visit Here

The premier earl of England, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and his wife, the Countess, will arrive in Washington early in May to visit Capt. and Mrs. B. P. DuBois for a few days at their home on Rowland place. This will be their first visit to Washington.

The early and countess, honeymooning after their wedding last winter in London, have been on an extended trip through the United States, West Indies and Mexico. They will sail for England May 8.

Lady Shrewsbury is the former Miss Nadine Crofton-Atkins, a schoolmate of Mrs. DuBois in Florence, Italy.

Mrs. Roosevelt In Retirement For Few Days

Cancels Engagements Out of Respect to the Late Col. Louis Howe.

Mrs. Roosevelt has canceled all her social engagements and all White House entertainments until after the burial, at Fall River tomorrow, of Col. Louis McHenry Howe, member of the White House family, who died Saturday night at the Naval Hospital.

Mrs. Howe and her son, Mr. Hartley Howe, and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Baker, are at the White House until after the funeral in the east room this afternoon. President and Mrs. Roosevelt will accompany them to Fall River tonight.

Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, son-in-law and daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, arrived at the White House last night and Mr. James Roosevelt is expected today.

Mrs. Roosevelt will return to Washington on Thursday in time to receive the officers and delegates to the Continental Congress of the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, now in session at Constitution Hall. She will leave for New York immediately after the reception.

Monday, Mrs. Roosevelt will visit her nephew, Mr. Daniel Roosevelt, at St. Paul's School, New Hampshire. Tuesday she will go to New Haven, Conn., to attend an educational meeting. She will return to Washington next Wednesday and hold her press conference on Thursday morning.

McKenneys to Sail For Europe in July

Mrs. Mallan to Accompany Parents on Trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic D. McKenney, and their daughter, Mrs. McKenney Mallan, are making plans to sail for Europe about the first of July to spend the summer.

Mrs. Mallan recently returned from Miami Beach, Fla., where she spent six weeks as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Rapley in their home, which they leased for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Rapley will return to Washington the first week in May and will be guests of the latter's sister, Mrs. Charles A. McKenney, in her home on Rhode Island avenue. Early in June they will go to Kennebunkport, Me., for the summer.

Mrs. Van Fossan Entertains at Tea

Mrs. William E. Borah Helps Alternate at Table.

Mrs. Ernest H. Van Fossan entertained at tea yesterday in her apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Assisting were Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. John McClure, Mrs. William E. Morgan, Mrs. Howard Leroy, Mrs. Robert Van Fossan, sister-in-law of the hostess, and Mrs. Thomas Brady, mother of Mrs. Van Fossan.

HAVE A COMPLEXION
INSTEAD OF A COMPLEX!
. . . Elizabeth Arden

● Are you, perhaps, like the woman who came to Elizabeth Arden's the other day? She had a dreadful inferiority complex. She thought her friends' lovely complexions were some kind dispensation of Providence with which she could never compete. But a friend had persuaded her to try a treatment at Elizabeth Arden's.

Naturally no one was surprised except the woman herself, at her appearance when the treatment was finished. She surveyed herself and gasped, "To think of the years I've wasted! I never dreamed I could look like that—so smooth, so young!" She resolved then and there to:

Have a Salon treatment once a week . . .

A course of six $3.50 treatments $18
A course of seven $5 treatments $25

I LIKE TO SAVE

That's Why I Use the B & O When I Go To New York

"I can ride in a modern, comfortable Individual Seat Coach, without extra charge. I can enjoy a good meal at very little cost. I save bother with hand baggage as it is checked on the train. Then when I arrive, I step from the train into a comfortable B & O Train Connection Motor Coach . . . and ride to the door of one of the leading hotels, or to the B&O Coach Station nearest to my destination. My bags are handed to me as I leave the coach—and no tips are expected or accepted.

"I save long walks and stair-climbing. I save taxi fare and tips. I save worry—confusion—and annoyance."

That's why so many women prefer to go B&O . . . why don't you try it next time?

Convenient feature trains morning, afternoon, night.

Oklahoman Successfully Mixes Play Writing and Homemaking

Delegate to Pen League Meeting Here Tells How She Does Plays.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

HOUSEWIVES who yearn to become painters, or writers or musicians and yet sacrifice their ambitions to dusting and dishwashing, might find inspiration in the accomplishments of an Oklahoma homemaker who is achieving enviable success as a playwright.

Recently in Washington to attend the convention of the League of American Pen Women, as president of her branch, Mrs. J. B. White, of Oklahoma City saw her play, "Hospital Romance," presented under the direction of Rose Robinson Cohen at a meeting of the league's drama group last week. This is one of the nine plays the author has had accepted for publication within the last two years.

Yesterday she explained how she has managed to win laurels as a writer at the same time she has looked after a house, a husband and a son and daughter, and pointed out that "any homemaker, with the same ambition, could accomplish as much as I have—easily."

Amateur Groups Good Market.

"Like most women, I have always wanted to write," she said. "And like most women, also, I first started when my children were small by trying my hand at poetry and short stories. Later, when I found I could handle conversation much better than description, I turned to plays, and discovered that there is a particularly good market for short ones that can be done by amateur groups.

"I went on writing, taking the inevitable rejection slips at first as a matter of course. I stayed at it. Kept sending my plays to publishers and was as surprised as anybody when acceptances began to come in. Now I have little difficulty in finding a market. My greatest trouble is in finding enough time to get the plays I have in mind down on paper."

She has more hours to devote to writing now, however, than back in the days when her children were small (the daughter is now 18; the son is a year younger). "But even then, I learned any woman can find time to do anything she really wants to do. Long ago, I got in the habit of spending every free moment at my typewriter. I learned, also, the value of concentrating on my plays even when I was doing household chores. While I prepare a meal, or mend clothes or clean silver, I am thinking out plots."

Typewriter Spurs Her On.

Another of her "constant encouragements to write" is her typewriter, which she said is "never tucked away in hiding, but is always in full view, reminding me to get to work at once, the minute my home duties are completed. You would be surprised how much time I find to devote to my writing every day," she went on. "Doing the actual work is not so difficult, you know, as forming the habit of starting it the minute you are free. Too many talented housewives waste time by always planning to start a play or a poem or a short story tomorrow, or next week, or next month." Thus they fritter away time, year after year, with none of their career-dreams fulfilled, according to Mrs. White.

Ideas around which her plays are built come from her own experiences. "Hospital Romance," for example, was based on incidents she observed on her daily trips to the hospital where her mother spent a few days. She is convinced any woman has "a wealth of material for plays" in her life, no matter where she lives or under what conditions.

Her pen name, she pointed out, was formed by the simple expedient of using her given name and changing the "i" to "y" in her married name. Thus Mrs. J. B. White, the wife and mother, became "Eugenia Whyte" the playwright, who mixes writing with homemaking and is making a success of both.

EUGENIA WHYTE, the playwright, in private life Mrs. J. B. White of Oklahoma City.

2 cups cut up rhubarb
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
4 tablespoons sugar for meringue
1 teaspoon butter

Line a pieplate with pastry. Wash and peel rhubarb, cut into small pieces, and dredge with flour until each piece is quite white. Mix the sugar, rhubarb and egg yolks together and place in the pie-pan. Dot with butter. Bake in a hot-to-slow oven (450 degrees F.) for 10 minutes, then 325 degrees for 30 minutes. When the filling is set, spread over the top the stiffly beaten whites of eggs into which the sugar has been beaten. Return to the oven and brown the meringue lightly (300 degrees to 350 degrees F.) for 8 to 10 minutes.

It Isn't Work, It's Monotony Causes Fatigue

Disease Sometimes Brings on Lassitude, but Mostly It's Mental.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Almost every one is familiar with the symptom of fatigue and it is probably the most common complaint which patients present to their physicians. It is described as lack of energy, lassitude, or even complete exhaustion.

Naturally, there are many disease conditions in which the symptoms is typical, for example, tuberculosis, cancer, anemia, diabetes, etc. None of these states, however, explains the vast number of instances in which "that tired feeling" dominates the situation.

Fatigue, as a rule, is not the result of overwork. Physical effort, even of excessive degree, rarely if ever is responsible for a breakdown. One can, of course, operate a figurative treadmill until muscles refuse to function, until lactic acid and other waste products accumulate in the tissues and exhibit their effects as nerve poisons.

If exhaustion is complained of only occasionally it is probably without significance. On the other hand, if the symptom appears with any reasonable degree of frequency, it must not be ignored. The slow absorption of pus from a focus of infection may undermine reserve and destroy the most formidable physique. If infected areas exist they should be removed.

In the largest number of cases, however, fatigue will be found to be due not so much to the absorption of toxins as to the mental reactions of the patient who has exhausted his stores of nervous reserve through fussing about himself or his work. The patient has established a vicious cycle that may have had its beginning in dislike for his job. As a result, he did his work less well; then came criticism from his immediate superior which added to his symptoms. He started and left work tired.

Monotony "Gets" Workers.

But few of us can uninterruptedly pursue a given task for any great length of time. We instinctively break the trend of almost any procedure. In fact, many observers believe that it is unnatural and unwise to perform a single maneuver without change. Individuals differ in this respect. In a room full of workers some will seek a drink of water almost every hour; others less often. A bit of conversation or a visit to the foreman's office, is an effort to vary the mental weariness of monotony.

Measurements of work output of employes undertaken by industrial concerns show wide variations. The more routine the tasks, the less efficient the performance. Employers have learned the advantage of breathing spells. In one industry employing a large number of women on an unusually montonous type of work, intervals of rest were allowed and a surprising number of the workers occupied themselves during this period with knitting. At the end of the recess, activity was resumed with greater zest and increased accuracy and productivity.

Most of us recognize the mental growth that comes when a task demands co-ordination of both body and mind. A dull, lethargic, "fed-up" office worker is sometimes transformed into an alert, forceful salesman by assignment to an outside occupation with its constant change of scene and the innumerable contacts with different sorts of people.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

Posed by Pat Patterson.

Effect of Illusive Feminine Fragrance Is Obtained Through New Body Sachet.

By Mignon.

The Mignon who writes this column does not sell, indorse or manufacture any cosmetics.

The good old days when women wore sachet and always had satin pads filled with it in all the dresser drawers are here again. If you are not a perfume addict, and a great many women object to anything as definite as perfume, you can't do better than to dust your body with a good sachet powder before you dress. I don't mean roll in it. Too much of anything, and especially of a fragrance, is worse than none. But pour some into your palm, then rub it over your arms and chest. The heat of the body releases the fragrance and it is the most delicate and ladylike way of perfuming oneself.

I want you to know about a body sachet that is so illusive no one ever can figure out what it is. A young woman I know went to dinner with a man she wanted very much to impress with her loveliness. She didn't want that obvious, so, being a subtle somebody, she used a bit of this sachet powder. They had hardly been seated at dinner when the young man said: "Are you wearing perfume, and, if you are, what is it?" He explained that he couldn't figure out whether it was a scent or just his imagination. There's no finer compliment for perfuming.

This is distinctly a feminine fragrance—one of those that remind you of the days when women wore trailing skirts and pale blue ribbons and always had their hair set exactly so and took a long time to dress.

Anyway, buy yourself some of this powder—it isn't expensive—and try it one of these days instead of smoking cigarettes just to see what happens.

Too Much Love Harms Family Relationships

Mothers Sometimes Are Overzealous in Contacts With Children.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"Why should my daughters resent me so? I have done everything for them, given them everything, sacrificed time and energy to make them happy, and yet they actually seem at times to dislike me and to want to get away from home."

Mrs. Smith was an exceptional mother. Everyone wondered at her single-minded devotion to her children. She never hesitated to give up her own pleasure for theirs, to go without in order that they might have the best. She guarded them against unhappiness, even against unpleasantness, and for years enjoyed their confidence and adoration. And then each girl, as she reached 15 or 16, seemed to change overnight and become rebellious and secretive.

The overzealous mother always has to face this situation.

Sometimes it is the consciousness of the sacrifice which offends the children. They resent the burden of obligation which has been laid upon them. They did not ask their mother to lay down her life and individuality for them, and are appalled at the future given up to repayment. For the mother's life is so bound up in her children that she has nothing of her own left to fill it, and must insist on sharing their lives forever.

Pleasant HOMES

HE'S A DARLING child, but there's nothing dainty about him. Even if his father is a college professor and his mother a former algebra teacher, he looks like a pugilist. So the idea of a sky blue pink nursery doesn't quite seem logical. His mother asks for some other ideas that might be worked out instead.

We have a little rowdy like that ourselves, and we compromised on a jolly little white and red and blue nursery. The walls are white, and we have painted the furniture all in white, too. The chest-wardrobe we decorated with big ABC's and numerals cut out of red oilcloth and glued on. (They could be painted on just as well though, maybe better). For his scales, we have one of those unpainted kidney-shaped dressing tables—it's just the right height—for it we made a petticoat of red, white and blue checked gingham. A white rocking chair has a gingham seat and the cot has the same gingham for a spread. His little crib has a spread made of a patchwork quilt in red, white and blue . . . made crib size. The windows have white marquisette curtains with the red, white and blue plaid bands, valance and tiebacks. The rug has a good deal of blue in it. The screen has animals on it.

MARY HAWORTH Says:

Don't Deal in Day Dreams Where Fickle Sweetheart Is Concerned; Busy Hands Help Alleviate Heartbreak

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About six years ago I met a man two years my senior and through association and his kindness to me I learned to love him. I was then in high school. After six months both of us moved to different places. We corresponded twice weekly and swore to be true to each other. After finishing high school I entered college, but found my interest in him hindered my scholastic progress. After spending one summer together at a sea shore he asked me to marry him. We planned to be married on my graduation day. About nine months after he had asked me to marry him he stopped writing to me without making any explanation of his action. This was such a shock that I grew thin, spent many sleepless nights and have never been the same since. I continued to write him just as before until I learned he was determined not to reply. Then I stopped.

Mary Haworth.

• • • •

After graduating from college I secured a job teaching and tried very hard to forget him by going out constantly with others. Subsequently, because of the old-fashioned ideas of people in the community concerning proper conduct for a teacher, I lost my job. Then I spent a week roaming and took to smoking. I wrote him and told him the truth of how I felt about him. His reply was: "Go home and rest. I am not satisfied with your actions and we may make a go of things yet if we don't lose our heads. Although I didn't keep my promise don't try to seek revenge. I have suffered enough." That was 17 months ago and the last letter I have received from him.

• • • •

I still love him and wish very much to see him again. I have tried so hard to forget him, but I cannot. I can't sleep. The thought of him haunts me. I am 22 and wish very much to marry, but he is the only man I have ever loved. How should I go about seeing him? Shall I write him? What shall I tell him?

• • • •

I am teaching again and so situated that I don't come in contact with many men I would care to associate with. I spend my time reading, writing and in school work. I understand he was within 30 miles of me in the last eight months, but only asked about me. Shall I go where he is, or wait the next 100 years for someone else? What shall I do? Please answer within the next three days. I'm nearly crazy with despondency.

HEARTSICK.

Achieve Self Control.

DEAR HEARTSICK: Face the facts here. This man has betaken himself out of your life and apparently has every intention of remaining out of it. You are going through a lot of lost motion in trying to devise ways and means of gaining an audience with him. Grieve over his loss if you must, but accept his departure from your life with as much finality as you would need to if he had died.

• • • •

I have two suggestions to offer for your getting hold of yourself. One is to change your occupation. Get into some line of work which will permit you greater freedom of thought and action, both during and outside working hours. The second is to try ocean travel as an anodyne. If you have some money saved, invest a part of it in transoceanic trip this summer, going tourist-third on one of the Baltimore mail line boats, or on one of the slower freighters which carry eight or ten passengers and take two weeks or so to cross. For information about the cost of such travel, inquire of Thomas Cook & Son-Wagon-Lits, Inc., travel service, 812 Fifteenth street northwest, National 4542.

• • • •

If you can't sleep, see a doctor. Any reputable physician can help you overcome the habit—for habit it is—of insomnia. Learn to control your thoughts. When you feel a wave of heartbreak washing over your mind, get up that instant and get busy doing something—dusting, window washing, mending, laundering, cooking or closet cleaning.

• • • •

Don't deal in day dreams where this man is concerned. It is possible, with deliberate conscientious practice, to learn to choose one's thoughts and emotions; to encourage and entertain those which make for peace and to discourage and eventually banish those which disturb and distress. Time and nature will help you overcome this heartbreak, if you will do your part.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

SUBSTITUTE SWEETHEART

By Priscilla Wayne

Forced to pose as June Bradley, whom she greatly resembles, Ruth Dayton finds herself involved in a plot to murder the man she loves, Jim Bradley. Jim, stepbrother of June, has been seriously injured, and blinded, in a mysterious accident. Ruth is brought into the Bradley home by Joseph and Clara Bradley, uncle and aunt of Jim and June, who have been caring for June. They explain to Ruth that June is ill and cannot come—and that Jim is dying and will never know.

Ruth falls in love with Jim and he with her. Fearing that he may die, he plans their marriage for the next day. The Bradleys and Pascoe, man nurse who is in the plot and who wants Ruth himself, appear to agree with Jim's plans but privately plan a fake marriage. Only Bette, Clara Bradley's maid, aids Ruth. Late that night before the wedding Bette unlocks Ruth's bedroom door. Outside the door to Jim's suite, Ruth hears a conversation between Pascoe and Dr. McGuire, who also seems to be in the plot, though unwillingly.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"YOU'RE WEARING us all to a frazzle," Pascoe protested. "It's been nine days now."

Dr. McGuire was impatient. "What if it has been? Better have it 90 days and get by with it safe. I tell you, we can't escape an autopsy as it is. We've got to be careful."

"Nonsense, who would there be to ask for an autopsy? I certainly wouldn't. The Bradleys wouldn't. And the girl wouldn't know enough to."

"Don't kid yourself that she wouldn't know enough to. We're going to have trouble with that girl yet."

Ruth hated Pascoe's sarcastic laugh. "And don't you kid yourself. I've fallen for that girl so hard it isn't funny."

"Well, that doesn't mean she's fallen for you."

"Oh, I don't know about that." Pascoe's egotism would have been funny under any other circumstances. "Most dames do fall for me sooner or later."

"My, you hate yourself, don't you?"

Pascoe jerked the conversation out of the personal rut. "Enough kidding, Doc. Answer what I asked you in the first place. Once the thing is over you sign the death certificate. You're an honest to God M. D. The relatives don't seem worried. I take care of the girl. And that's that. Nobody's wise—to anything."

"Haven't you forgotten Benson?"

"What Benson?"

"The doctor who was on the case when I came."

Dismissed.

"Well, what about him?" Joe merely told him he wasn't satisfied with the handling of the case. Dismissed him. Criminy! What's wrong with that?

"Doc, I don't believe you'd make a good crook. Good thing I had the goods on you in that dope smuggling case or we'd be high and dry without any M. D. at all to put the finishing touches on our little scheme."

"I wish to heaven I'd never seen any of you. I hate this job, I tell you. I hate it." McGuire's voice was raised high in emotion.

Pascoe made a swift move. Ruth decided he must have caught McGuire's arm. She heard McGuire utter a sharp exclamation of pain.

"You're going through with this right away. Hear? You've stalled long enough. This is the queerest case of its kind I've ever been up against. One day you think it's all over. The next you're afraid your patient's going to get up and go downtown. It's your fault. You've stalled."

"I tell you it had to be done slowly. I had to make sure that even if it came to an autopsy, we might get by—"

"Piffle. I'll take care of that. Now let me tell you—" He turned toward the door. Ruth forced herself to leave the door. She had her chance to escape. She must not muff it. One glance in Jim's open door. He was sleeping, lightly. He moved ever so slightly the instant she watched, moaned just a little.

Stealthily, without waiting to snatch a wrap of any kind, Ruth moved quietly down the wide stairway and to the entrance. It was the work of a minute or two to push back the huge bolts in their handsome, carved fastenings. The door swung open easily, letting in a rush of cold air.

Ruth did not hear the quick steps behind her, believed herself free for one maddening instant, then a hand with a grip like iron seized her arm and, even though she fought furiously, dragged her back into the great hall and flung her to the floor.

Lying there, sobbing with rage, and the exertion of that one minute when she had struggled against that arm, Ruth found herself peering up at Pascoe.

Pascoe laughed. "If you weren't stark crazy, I'd say you were—asking that," he said shortly, "now get to your room. You're so darned pretty tonight that I may forget I've got other duties than to make love to you. Get up to your room right away and take my advice. Be quiet. If you'll be good I'll not tell the Bradleys about this.

"Clara Bradley has stood just about all she can stand. If you don't watch out she'll bump you off. How she ever forgot to lock you in is more than I can understand.

"They've laid you off because I told them right off that you were my share of the job. Why, see, honey, you'll forget this once we're away from here. I'm gonna take you to Europe. You and me will have the best trip you ever imagined in your wildest days.

Ruth went slowly up the stairway to her own room, followed by Pascoe. 'Now go to bed, honey, please do," he reiterated, whispering. "I'll lock you in myself now and take the trouble to take the key along."

Listening, standing in her room in the dark, Ruth heard again the sound of the key turned stealthily in the lock.

Someone else heard the key turn. Ruth heard quick steps across the floor of the room next door. Joe's door opened. His voice was an excited whisper, "Pascoe."

"Yes," Pascoe was annoyed.

"What's the matter?"

"Nothing."

"What you up here for?"

"Wouldn't you like to know?"

"That girl?"

Pascoe laughed. "I told you she'd fall for me."

"Oh." Joe was undoubtedly pleased. "Well, good enough, Pascoe. Don't know as I blame you. Everything else O. K.?"

"Yes."

"McGuire here yet?"

"Yes."

Pascoe started down the corridor. Ruth, listening, heard Joe Bradley's quick bare feet padding after him. Pascoe stopped. The two held a long conversation. Not a word of it was loud enough for Ruth to hear.

Wait for Dawn.

Morning brought Bette. "Did you——," she checked her sentence, unfinished. Clara Bradley, in negligee, lounged into the room. "Don't mind if I have breakfast in your room, do you, June? This house gives me the creeps."

Clara sat down in an easy chair, curled her feet under her like any girl. "I couldn't sleep very well last night. Heard you couldn't either." She leered at the girl.

Ruth loathed the woman. Wished she could go. "I slept," she said, "at least part of the time."

"Did you June? Well, I couldn't."

"How is Jim this morning?"

Clara was plainly angry at the turn of events. I don't seem to know. McGuire stayed all night. He says Jim is worse. Myself, I can't see it. I think he's better. And he's as excited as a boy. This is his wedding day."

Clara suddenly laughed, long and loud. "I forget. Your wedding day, too, isn't it? Well, you'll have to be a good sport and go through with it."

Bette re-entered, bringing the breakfast tray.

Clara poured the coffee, took eager, quick sips of the hot liquid. "Take some," she advised. It'll do you good. Coffee certainly perks me up."

After breakfast Joseph Bradley knocked at the door. "Come in," Clara called. "What now?"

"I've got arrangements made."

"So soon?" Clara was excited.

"Yes, if we have to go through with it, then the sooner the better."

"Got a minister?"

"Yes."

"The minister?"

Joseph Bradley laughed. "Well, come on and decide for yourself. Everybody's ready but the bride."

Women Wearing Western Clothes

Arizona Mood May Affect Summer Riding Styles.

Women at the smart hotels in the desert resorts are wearing the brilliantly colored satin shirts and white whipcord jodhpurs that are most familiar to us when cowboys and cowgirls perform at a rodeo.

It is possible that with the present importance of strong color in all fields of fashion, the Arizona mood may affect summer riding styles. The colors are raw vivid reds, purples, greens, orange and yellows, and kerchiefs of soft China silk in equally brilliant hues. When they are worn knotted around the neck they are chosen in a color that contrasts as sharply as possible with the shirt.

Sharp Tongue Unpopular

QUITE A WIT Leona thinks she is. And yet not very popular. She's certainly not making any headway with Fred, as we can easily see.

"Oh, Fred, you look so funny in that tie! Been saving it since Christmas. It'd make a dandy pattern for linoleum!"

Fred responds with a sickly grin to this well-meant banter, but soon moves off to seek the company of Charlotte, who doesn't make these personal thrusts.

"Hello, Fred," says Charlotte. "We're just figuring on the first picnic of the season. This time I guarantee to bring a box of sandwiches instead of Dad's new shoes, like I did last time!"

Clever girl, Charlotte. The joke is on her, not on Fred. No wonder she's popular.

Granted that men are queer and vain, you have to take them as they are. They resent ridicule, a sharp tongue, sarcasm, any joke with a sting.

It's usually some little unpleasant trick like this that makes a girl unpopular.

Julia, for instance, tries to imitate the English accent of one of her neighbors; Carrie sponges small sums of money; Selma tattles malicious gossip.

Cultivate popular traits and live in a warm, friendly atmosphere. Generosity, frankness, good grooming, all help. Our 40-page illustrated booklet gives you tips from a noted psychologist on the whys of popularity. A real eye-opener on the knack of making friends.

How a Baby GROWS

By Dr. Arnold Gesell, M. D.

INFANT EYES—Yesterday's pictures depicted the stage of development the baby's eyes had reached at 12 weeks; today, the same child is shown at 24 weeks of age. In the first picture, at the left, the eyes of the child are alert as the examiner places two cubes before him. In the second picture the eyes fix on one cube; they glance at the other cube in the third picture and then return to the cube that originally caught the child's interest. TOMORROW: The Eyes at 32 Weeks.

P. U. C. Price On Bus Lines Is Accepted

Capital Transit Company Agrees to $478,537 for W. R. T. Co.

Merger Planned at Once; Contract Now Being Drafted.

Price and terms prescribed by the Public Utilities Commission governing proposed purchase of the Washington Rapid Transit Co. by the Capital Transit Co. were accepted by John H. Hanna, president of the street car company, in a letter to the commission yesterday.

The commission, in a letter to Hanna dated last Friday, fixed a maximum price of $478,537 for the bus company, of which $327,253.87 was the amount of a bus company note held by the North American Co., of New York, and $148,659 was for 21,237 bus company shares held in the name of J. E. Baker, of New York. Immediate and permanent merger of the two companies was made a condition of approval by the commission.

"Since receipt of the letter," Hanna told the commission, "I have discussed the matter with Baker and am informed by him that he will accept the terms specified by the commission."

"Accordingly, I have to inform you that a new contract will be executed including the terms specified in your letter and will be submitted to the commission within a few days."

The contract language will be studied when it is submitted and, unless objectionable provisions are found, the deal will be approved by the commission, Riley E. Elgen, chairman, predicted.

William A. Roberts, people's counsel, last Saturday submitted a memorandum to the commission objecting that the price it approved for purchase of the North American interest in the bus company was too high. All of the factors referred to by Roberts in his memorandum had been studied carefully by the commission prior to the time it made its public reply to the street car company, Elgen and Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, said.

The bus company has been a white elephant on the hands of the North American, a national utilities holding concern, since 1928 and repeated efforts have been made to dispose of it advantageously. The first effort, which failed, was to have the bus company included in the street car merger at a value of $1,146,000.

New Proposal Submitted.

Purchase of the company by the merged street car company was then taken up with the commission and informal discussions proceeded from the latter part of 1933 until September, 1934, when the commission formally was asked to approve payment of $843,178 for the bus company. The proposal was rejected after a public hearing in the course of which officers of the Capital Transit Co., control of which is held by the North American, urged the bus company was especially valuable to it.

D. C. Jewish Youth To Aid Fund Drive

Jewish youth of Washington will take an active part this year through their various organizations in the $50,000 united Jewish appeal, now in progress here.

Meeting last night at the Jewish Community Center, members of the Junior Hadassah, the Young Peoples Leagues of the Washington Hebrew Congregation and the B'nai Israel Synagogue, the Junior Mizrachi, the Zionist Forum, the Council of Jewish Juniors and the Council of Jewish Youth, organized a drive division of several hundred members. Hyman Lytton, Mrs. Julius Goldstein and Nathan Volkman were chosen co-chairmen of the division.

Joseph D. Kaufman, Isidore Hershfield, John M. Safer, Mrs. Safer and Louis E. Spiegler, leaders i nthe $50,000 drive, spoke to the gathering on the need for raising funds this year to alleviate the distress among Jews of Poland and Germany and to build up Palestine.

Catholic Exhibit Is Inspected at C. U.

Washington's 'Best People' Bid Spiritedly for Iran Treasures

Week of Auctioneering Opens at Art Galleries; Serves as Anti-Climax to Stir Following Arrest of Djalal, and Closing of Legation.

In the words of Benjamin S. Bell, auctioneer, some of the city's "best people" turned out yesterday to pay tribute with their pocketbooks to the possessions of the departed M. Hossein Ghods, charge d'affaires at the Iranian Legation.

Among those who attended the sale in the Washington Art Galleries at 722 Thirteenth street northwest, were persons who had been guests at the legation and who had admired the rugs and rare antiques from the land of Omar. They bid spiritedly for them yesterday.

It was sort of a local farewell to Iran, nee Persia, as the auctioneer's hammer, with a ring of finality on the word "sold" seemed to close the series of "diplomatic incidents" which began last autumn with the arrest of the Minister, Ghaffer Djalal, in Elkton, Md., on a traffic charge.

It is history now that the Shah of Iran, a former stableboy, it is said, called home both his minister and his charge d'affaires because he was displeased, not with them, but with the American reaction to the events, which included the discharge and rehiring and discharge of two Elkton peace officers who had the temerity to manacle Ghaffer Djalal after the latter was alleged to have tried to push one from the running board of his car.

The articles which are being sold are the property of Ghods. Top price yesterday—$280—was paid for a rug, a beautiful wine carafe, studded with rubies and emeralds, sold with the auctioneer's admonition that if the jewels are real he will return the money and take the carafe back, brought $25. The sale of the articles will continue each day of this week.

Fourth Victim In Virginia Car Accident Dies

Negro Charged in Hit-Run Death of Woman; U. S. Worker Arrested.

Another death yesterday in Alexandria Hospital brought to four the deaths resulting from a collision Saturday night on the Mount Vernon highway.

Meanwhile, police have two Negroes under arrest in connection with the death of Lucille Daniels, Negro, 37, who was found in an alley near Seventh and R streets northwest. An autopsy showed the woman a victim of a hit-and-run driver. She was the thirty-first District traffic death.

Police said the woman was not deliberately run down, as was suspected. Detective Sergt. William Liverman said the dead woman had succeeded in a 1-cent numbers play but had not attempted to cash the bet.

Mrs. Elaine Keyworth, 43, of 52 Quincy place northwest, was the fourth person to die after the Memorial boulevard crash.

3 Others Killed.

The others killed were Mrs. Irene C. Johnson, 37, of 3708 New Hampshire avenue northwest; Fred J. Kammerer, 30, of 1210 Ingraham street northwest, and Walter J. Mooney, 22, of 3629 Jenifer street northwest.

A crash on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard Saturday night resulted in the death of Mrs. Mary Eckloff, 27, of 2842 Belair place northwest.

All of the others injured in the head-on collision between a car operated by Kamerer and one driven by Mooney were reported improved yesterday. They are Ensign Herman J. Mecklenburg, 22, who is in Naval Hospital; his fiance Dorothy Vize, 19, of 3321 Sixteenth street northwest, and Mary Shuler, 18, a student of Fairmont School, whom Mooney was escorting.

Woman Given Bond.

Mrs. Rebekah K. Pedigo, an Interior Department worker, of the Conard Apartments, was released on bond of $100 yesterday following her arrest on charges of reckless driving by Montgomery County police at Rockville, Md. Police said she was driving her car in a zigzag manner on the Frederick pike near Rockville Sunday. Her trial in County Police Court was set for May 8.

Mrs. Pedigo spent Sunday night in the Rockville Jail because she refused to post collateral. Police said she told them that she wanted to call Secretary Ickes to tell him she was "being held in a jerkwater town on false charges" and that she threatened to have Justice of the Peace Charles M. Webb's commission taken from him.

Relief Pleas Taken to Bell By City Heads

Approval of $258,000 Additional Aid Urged at Hearings.

Bureau Gave No Hint as to Possible Step, Say Commissioners.

Approval of their request for $258,000 more for relief for the balance of the current fiscal year was urged before Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the Federal Budget Bureau, by the District Commissioners at hearings at the Bureau yesterday.

Neither Commissioner George E. Allen, who has supervision of welfare and relief activities, nor Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, nor Col. Dan I. Sultan, engineer commissioner, would predict the bureau's decision.

Need Recognized.

"The bureau gave us no indication what action it would take on the proposal," said Hazen.

The $258,000 request represents the difference between the $608,000 requested for relief for this year and the $350,000 appropriated by Congress.

Lack of funds caused relief officials to order all employables cut off relief April 1. Unless additional funds are appropriated, it was said, there is no prospect that those cut off will get further public relief.

"We recognize the need of these people. That is incontestable," Elwood Street, director of public welfare, said. "It simply is a question of not having money with which to help them. There is nothing we can do about the matter. It already has been decided by the Budget Bureau and Congress, at least for the time being."

Stories of pitiful pleas for aid, made by men, women and children, continued to be relayed to relief headquarters and to heads of private agencies connected with the Community Chest. The latter, too, said there was nothing they could do to aid those cut off because their organizations already were carrying a full load.

Would Pledge Bonus.

Threat of rain yesterday morning held up service of an eviction writ by a deputy United States marshal. The man has a wife and three children. They are $32.50 in arrears in their rent. They live on Gales street northeast. Until employables were cut off, the family got $30 a month.

The man, a sergeant in the World War, was honorably discharged. He is employed only part time at poor paying jobs. He has offered to pledge any part of his bonus which soon will be payable. Today he man will have a day of work. His wife is earning 25 cents an hour as a part-time nurse for a neighboring family.

The landlord has insisted the eviction be carried out and unless there is some change in the situation this morning the family will be put on the street.

Joseph De Bettencourt Wins Term at Harvard

Joseph T. De Bettencourt, of Washington, a graduate student at Catholic University and the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. De Bettencourt, of 3905 Thirteenth street northeast, has been awarded the Gordon McKay scholarship in the graduate school of engineering at Harvard University for the academic year 1936-1937, it was learned yesterday.

A graduate of Central High School, of Washington, De Bettencourt entered the school of engineering at the Catholic University in September, 1928, on a scholarship assigned to him for the excellence of his work in Central High School. Upon receiving the degree of bachelor of science in electrical engineering in June, 1932, De Bettencourt re-enrolled at the university for graduate work. He took his master's degree, majoring in physics, in 1934. He is a candidate for the degree of doctor of philosophy at Catholic University.

Long Illness Is Fatal To Mrs. T. J. Williams

Mrs. Lula Irene Williams, 45, wife of Fire Capt. Thomas J. Williams, of No. 13 Engine Company, died Sunday after a long illness at her home, 907 Twelfth street northeast.

Born in Washington, Mrs. Williams is survived by her husband, a son, Joseph R. Williams, and her mother, Mrs. Sarah Reintzel.

Funeral services will be held from her home at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow, to be followed by requiem mass at Holy Name Catholic Church and interment in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Hope of Vote On Red Rider In 1936 Dims

Byrns Forced to Cancel April 27 D. C. Day to Debate Tax.

Certain Filibuster Faces Sisson Bill, Blocked Till May 11 or 25.

By James D. Secrest.

Washington public school teachers are threatened with another year's ban on the mention of communism and modern Russian history because of the priority of national legislation over District bills in Congress, it developed yesterday.

Speaker Byrns, always sympathetic with the trials of the House District Committee, was forced to cancel the April 27 District day, on which the Sisson bill was scheduled to be called up in an effort to repeal the anti-red rider.

House leaders decided that the tax bill, on which 16 hours of debate have been scheduled, beginning Thursday, and the two pend-appropriations bills—Navy and de-deficiency—must be disposed of before any other special legislative days are allowed, Byrns said.

This means that the Sisson bill and other District legislation will have to wait until May 11, at the earliest, and possibly until May 25, before it can be called up in the House, and then it will face the customary congestion in both the House and the Senate.

"I'm awfully sorry about it," Speaker Byrns said. "But I just had to do it. We've got to get the tax bill and the two appropriations bills out of the way and over to the Senate before we do anything else."

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, who was chairman of the sub-committee which reported the Sisson measure, will confer with other members actively interested in repealing the anti-red rider before deciding what steps to take to assure House action on the bill.

Faces Filibuster.

As the measure faces a certain filibuster, its sponsors are afraid that the delay until mid-May or later will make it impossible to get a vote under normal procedure. Consequently, the House Rules Committee may be asked to grant a special rule as it did for the Ellenbogen rent commission bill.

The House delay will proportionally diminish the prospects of Senate passage of the companion Wheeler bill to repeal the anti-red rider.

Several Senators, among them Chairman King, of the House District Committee, believe the rider should be retained. They could easily, if they desire, block the bill even if it were passed by the House.

Among the other local bills threatened with death by the loss of one District day or more are the juvenile court, the magistrate courts, the lunacy commission, and several traffic control measures.

Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, in a radio talk over station WJSV last night in reply to the recent talk by Representative Blanton, of Texas, said: "The so-called red rider is an insult to every patriotic school teacher in Washington.

"I appeal to every father and mother in reach of my voice who believes in fair play to ask their Representatives in Congress to remain on the floor and listen to all the arguments presented on the Sisson bill. If they do this I have no doubt that they will render a proper verdict when the bill is voted on.

"The charge that has been made regarding communism in the public schools of Washington has not been proven. So far as I have been able to learn upon investigation I would say that it has been founded upon prejudice, not fact."

Senate Unit Meets Today On District Supply Bill

The Senate sub-committee on District appropriations will meet at 10 a. m. today in executive session to mark up the 1937 District supply bill.

The sub-committee also will decide whether to attach the proposed traffic laws to the bill or to turn them over to Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, as legislative matter. Indications were that the latter course may be followed because of the probability that members of the House might challenge them if appended to the bill as riders.

C. U.-Notre Dame Grid Series Urged by Bergman at Dinner

Coach Cites Friendship of Schools to Alumni of South Bend Institution; Bishop McNamara Asks United Catholic Action.

Gridiron engagements between Catholic University and the "Fighting Irish" were proposed last night by Arthur J. ("Dutch") Bergman, Cardinal football coach, at a Washington Notre Dame Club dinner.

Bergman, a Notre Dame halfback in the heyday of the late Knute Rockne, drew applause when he said the scholastic friendship and rivalry between the universities should be extended to include football games.

Several hundred Notre Dame clubs throughout the world met simultaneously. The Washington and South Bend, Ind., campus proceedings were broadcast.

Program of Action.

A program of Catholic Action was outlined by the Right Rev. J. M. McNamara, Bishop of Baltimore Archdiocese.

Other Washington speakers included the Rev. John F. O'Hara, university president; Senator Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana; Ambrose O'Connell, aid of Postmaster General Farley, and Bishop Brennen, Erie, Pa.

Bishop McNamara was introduced by Frank C. Walker, while Dr. O'Hara was introduced by James D. Hayes, Washington Notre Dame Club president.

Speaks From South Bend.

Bernard J. Voll, alumni president, spoke from South Bend. He urged graduates to aid the university "which has done so much for you."

The 300 Washington alumni heard Sidney's Orchestra play Notre Dame songs. The Moreau choir sang.

Dinner committeemen were: Thomas S. Markey, chairman; Mr. Bergman, Charles De Barry, Samuel Richards, Emett McCabe, Andrew Auth, Thomas Garver, Dr. James A. Flynn, James D. Hayes, James Sanford, Charles Mannix, Bernard Loshborough and Charles P. Neill.

Rites to Be Today For Mrs. Poivret

Funeral services will be held this morning at Padgett's funeral home for Mrs. Elizabeth A. Poivret, 67, of 1318 Rhode Island avenue northwest, who died Friday in Miami, Fla. She had been ill for several months.

Born in Westmoreland County, Va., Mrs. Poivret had lived in Washington for nearly 50 years. She was a member of Electa Council, Order of the Eastern Star, and of Mount Vernon Council, Daughters of America.

Mrs. Poivret is survived by her husband, Alexander A. Poivret, and two daughters, Mrs. Stanley K. Burk and Mrs. Lucy E. Hurd, both of Washington.

Four Men Held On 45 Charges Of Tire Cutting

Quartet Face Year on Each Count for Vandalism on Taxicabs.

Forty-five charges of destroying private property were placed yesterday against each of four men, arrested Sunday by the hack inspector's office for allegedly slashing the tires on parked taxicabs and private autos.

They will be arraigned in Police Court today and may be sentenced to a year in jail on each count.

All were arrested by Policemen Ray Aggleson and A. P. Griffin on Sunday following a complaint by Gabriel Firtag, a Diamond Cab Co. driver, that the tires on his car had been cut.

Firtag said he was awakened by a telephone call about 8 a. m. Sunday by a man who told him he had seen two men who got out of a City Cab cut the tires on Firtag's car. Police went to the City Cab garage at 2303 Fourteenth street northwest and arrested Barry after his taxi was identified in the depredations.

Barry was arrested, Harler and Stroud followed the police to the Tenth Precinct Station, where Barry was held, and their interest made police suspicious and they also were placed in a cell.

Finnan was arrested yesterday after the other men confessed to the crime and implicated him. Griffin and Aggleson said the men could give no reason for their acts except that they were drinking.

D. C. Studies Plan to Unite Welfare Units

Survey of Institutions Seen as First Step in Program.

Criticism of Girls School Revealed Need for Reorganization.

Reorganization and possible consolidation of scattered District welfare institutions is under consideration by the Commissioners, it was disclosed yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Whatever changes might be sought would be based on a complete survey of the present institutions, their physical condition, location, cost of operation, possible benefits to be achieved by consolidating some, suitability of the establishments to the character of their work, and a study of the laws under which the institutions were brought under the jurisdiction of the Board of Public Welfare, it was said.

Whether an attempt will be made to prepare necessary legislation for introduction and enactment at this session of Congress has not been decided.

Need for a thorough overhauling of the physical machinery of the welfare agencies was brought to issue recently by criticism of the condition of the National Training School for Girls at Conduit and Little Falls roads.

Plans of the Commissioners to have the survey made were discussed with Budget Bureau officials at a hearing yesterday on pending relief, welfare and supplemental appropriation requests. Approval of the Budget Bureau was sought for $100,000 for improvement of the girls school immediately. The requested improvements, the Commissioners urged, should be made without delay and independent of any long-time program which may be developed on the basis of the contemplated survey.

Approval of the $100,000 item is expected to be given by the Bureau.

Just what institutions might be included in the reorganization has not been determined. It was pointed out that in addition to the Training School for white and colored girls there is the National Training School for Boys on Bladensburg road, the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, the Receiving Home for Children at 816 Potomac avenue southeast, District training school at Laurel, Md., the industrial home school, for white, 2453 Wisconsin avenue, the industrial home school for colored at Blue Plains, the juvenile court, child caring offices and other institutions.

No definite program for consolidation or changes in any of these has been worked out, it was said. It may be that Congressional authority and funds for a special survey will be asked this session. Another proposal is to take longer time at the task and have the survey made by existnig personnel and executives.

Some changes probably would have to be made in existing laws covering commitment of children to various institutions and by various courts, it was pointed out. This would make necessary a study of all the laws relating to the various institutions and agencies.

Adams to Be New Takoma Mayor

John R. Adams, present town councilman of Takoma Park, Md., will automatically become mayor of the town when the annual elections are held May 4. Adams was the only candidate nominated for mayor at the annual caucus, attended by 300 persons in Takoma Park yesterday.

Four others were nominated for town councilmen. Three nominations were for two vacancies in Montgomery County, and one in Prince Georges. The town is situated in both counties. Those nominated for Montgomery are: Harold A. Axtell, Fred C. Duehring and Albert B. Ground.

Capt. Harold W. Orcutt, present councilman in Prince Georges County, was renominated for the only vacancy and like Adams, will automatically be elected May 4.

Visitors Find W. C. Fields, Ill, At His Funniest

Friends Parade by His Bed to Hear of 'Sacroiliac Trouble.'

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Calif., April 20.—There are times when even a comedian wants to be taken seriously, and this is one of them, for potato-nosed W. C. Fields, the movie buffoon.

Fields is ill again. In fact, he's in bed.

But the forbearance usually accorded a sick man is not his. Hearing of his disability, his friends guffaw, "Oh, boy, let's go see him—now's when he's funniest." They have been parading to his side again, just as they did during the eight months when he was having his "sacroiliac trouble."

That was partly his own fault.

Fields has a flair for big words. He rolls them slowly over his tongue as though they were luscious mushrooms. Consequently, he was frequently talking about his "sacroiliac trouble."

Years ago, he broke his neck in a Mack Sennett comedy. Taken to a hospital, he was duly strapped in bed. He wiggled out of the apparatus and went home in his nightshirt. He still has a broken neck, which somehow has translated itself into "sacroiliac trouble."

Think It a Joke.

His numerous friends, who have heard him talk so freely about his disability, can't take him seriously when he is ill.

In addition to his broken neck, there are two other things about which W. C. Fields—born Claude William Duninfield, Philadelphia, 1879—does not joke. They are his vocabulary and his appreciation for good liquor.

Yet, these three are precisely the pegs on which most of what Hollywood calls "laughs" are hung.

Fields is an extraordinarily well-educated man. In his globe-trotting days, when taking a sea voyage he would buy a trunk, fill it with books, lock himself in his cabin and stay there until the boat docked.

One story is that an essay on juggling, by Huxley, affected him so profoundly he lost his own wizardry in the trick.

The essay described the tremendous amount of co-ordination necessary to juggle. Fields, then considered the world's greatest juggler, is said to have been hooted off a London stage because, when he tried to juggle, he was reminded of the essay's explanation of the difficulty of juggling, and couldn't concentrate.

Enjoys Immunity.

He is the only movie star about whom the Hays office will allow liquor publicity to be written. Fields is a connoisseur.

Consequently, he was genuinely annoyed when Baby Leroy, teamed with him in a picture, pushed a bottle of good wine into a lake. The incident became a "gag," but it wasn't funny to Fields.

He used to be sensitive about his bulbous nose, too.

But an elephant changed his attitude. The pachyderm was working with him in a picture. Suddenly, it snaked its trunk over to Fields' big red nose, jerked it away, and trumpeted violently.

"He thought it was an apple," a trainer told Fields. "He's disappointed, now."

And the Carlos Israels (he's the son of the late Belle Moskowitz, Al Smith's advisor) . . . June Preisser, "Follies" dancer, isn't icing John Frost, jr. (his dad is the sugar king) . . . Isabel Pulsford, in the "Follies," weds Dr. Fulton . . . Gertrude Niesen and Jay Gould are acting kittenish at the Kit-Kat . . . Valerie Ziegler and Jack Trow are Back Together again . . . Paul Warburg and Dolly Richards are Dawn Patrolling . . . Majorie Lane will become Mrs. Brian Donlevy as soon as he gets the final papers . . . The Lionel Standers have Built Up To a Terrific Letdown . . . Eddie Davis warbled on and on at Leon & Eddie's Saturday midnight, patrons never knowing that waiters were quenching a blaze on the roof . . . Josephine Baker returns to Follies Bergere, in Paree.

Henry (Longchamps) Lustig made a $15,000 killing at the races Saturday, seven winners . . . Emil Coleman's lad, Harry, and Helen Gaffney are blazing . . . Betty Jane Hardesty is divorcing B. B. B., night club clown . . . Betty Sundmark whiled away the time in Buenos Aires with Alberto Dodero, Argentine shipbuilder, who has too many millions . . . Francis T. Hunter and Margie King will have a spring wedding . . . George Marshall gets the final papers on April 25, and then elopes with Honey Johnson . . . Benny Davis and J. Fred Coots have re-teamed as a Tin Pan Alley combination . . . Add Spring Fevers: Dolores (Hollywood) Casey and Dick Merrill, Dot Jeffers and Jack Eigen, Betsy Berkeley and Bill Kay, Ellen Crocker and Jack Coleman, Edythe York and Bob Allen, Hal Kemp, vocalist; Gloria Grafton and Orville Knapp, Waldorf maestro; Edith Wright, Tommy Dorsey's vocalist, and Tom McAvity, the ad man.

Claudia Morgan replaces Ilka Chase in "Co-respondent Unknown" while Ilka plays the lead in an appendix operation . . . Marcus Daly jr.'s widow, who divorced George Djamgaroff in November, may try it again with Tevis Huhn . . . Willie and Eugene Howard are cracking Versailles records . . . Banks that control the Brooklyn Dodgers, not Jedge McKeever, are to blame for stinginess . . . Joyce Johnson, Paradise peach, gets the final papers June 4 . . . Adolph Zukor's forthcoming tangle with Prexy Otterson indicates more Paramount exiles . . . The Matty (Decca) Murphys expect Sir Stork . . . Ditto the J. Russell McCarthys, the adv. biggie . . . Ditto the Jack Rocamoros . . . Ned Marin will wed Mary Howard . . . Mrs. Mack Gordon is having her nose bobbed . . . But he still weighs 273 pounds . . . In "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," the movies have coined "pixillated," a word that indicates daffiness . . . This is the first wordage contribution of the flickers since Elinor Glyn reduced sex-appeal to "It."

Add Hands-Across-the-Table: Sylvia Froos and Abe Marovitz, Chi lawyer; Ruth Weston and Ted Trevor, Mrs. Robert Grimes and Jack Chisholm, Edna Johnson and Winnie Gardener, Dixie Dunbar and Film Cutter Bob Herndon. Marion Marsh and Al Scott, Kay Thompson and Jack Jenny, Cornelia (Follies) Rogers and Dr. Wolff, Florence Ketcham and Mark Bennet, Sally Ingram and Dario, Elissa Landi and Jean Negulesco, Mary Lane and Joe Ricardel, Virginia Langdon and Milton Douglas . . . None of the New York insurance companies shared in the $2,000,000 policy which Artie Stebbins wrote on Shirley Temple, as New York limits insurance on Children under 10 to $1,000 . . . Midge Gaige has picked May as the date . . . The Billy Seymours (Mary Kirk Brown) leave for the Coast Saturday, and very happy too.

About The Showshops

DESPITE the reams that have been written about "The Great Ziegfeld" since that magnificent display of cinematographic wizardry first exploded its blinding effulgence in the face of a dazzled public, there still are aspects of the spectacle now packing them in twice daily at the National that have not been touched upon.

BELL.

One concerns the reason that more of the old "Follies" stars are not cast in the picture. That seems to be a matter of money. A great many of these distinguished alumni—and alumnae—still are living and would have had to have been paid handsome salaries either to appear in the film or permit the use of their names. Some were prevented by binding contracts to other producing companies—Eddie Cantor and W. C. Fields, for example.

Several of Ziegfeld's old associates are referred to by their first names as a means of evading this salary stymie. Thus "Gene" is meant to be Gene Buck, now president of the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; "Jerry" is Jerome Kern, and so on down the list.

This column has been asked repeatedly why more of the old, familiar names do not occur in the dramatis personnae of the film. To have included them all would have been utterly impossible. How could any author possibly find a place in his script for all who now appear there, plus Bickel & Watson, Grace La Rue, Mlle. Dazie, Nora Bayes, Jack Norworth, Frank Tinney, Bernard "Bunny" Granville, Dolores, Valeska Suratt, Gallagher & Shean, Andrew Tombes, Gilda Grey, George Le Maire, Mary Lewis, Lulu McConnell, Walter Catlett, Ina Claire and the hosts of others who might be recalled?

As a matter of fact, Ann Pennington and Leon Errol both were supposed to be in the picture. "Penny" was filmed in a song sequence that was left on the cutting-room floor and Errol was held on the lot during the shooting without ever having had a camera focused on him. And that's the way it went.

Which is probably just as well. Any more opulent revelation of pictorial splendor and gifted personnel no doubt would have caused the audience to swoon along about the third reel and demand its money back for having missed the picture!

Speaking of casts, the roster of players assembled to support Walter Huston in Gaumont British's "Rhodes," now on the screen at the Metropolitan, is one not to be overlooked. Basil Sydney, who plays the role of Jameson, is well known to Capital audiences, having played here in seasons past with his wife, Mary Ellis, in such things as "Jewel Robbery," at the Belasco, and the like. Frank Cellier, the Barney Barnato of the film, was the sinister symbol of the power of evil with Conrad Veidt in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," and Oscar Homolka is looked upon as one of the most competent character actors on the continent—a Viennese, I think. It is not their fault, nor Huston's, that "Rhodes" is not another "Cimarron."

"Dear Nelson: This is belated but none the less sincere thanks for all that you did for 'Winterset.' We had a splendid engagement in Washington and followed that with a capacity half-week in Cleveland. Our Chicago engagement will be for three weeks, after which we hope to play Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Detroit, Toronto, Buffalo and Pittsburgh before the show returns to New York. My address here is the Harris Theater. Regards and best wishes. (Signed) BILL."

Such, in part, is the note from William Fields, chief stentor for the production, dated in Chicago April 17, bearing latest tidings of the Maxwell Anderson play recently honored by receiving the first award of the New York Drama Critics' Circle as the best play of the year.

Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, popular near-Washingtonians, who comprise one of the cleverest dance teams on the contemporary vaudeville stage, are back in America after six months of continuous activity in the music halls of London and the provinces. They are booked to appear at Loew's Fox Theater in this city the week of May 29. In private life they are husband and wife, brother and sister-in-law of Goldie Ahearn, matchmaker for Joe Turner's fisticuffing and outfitter to the gayer and less conservative of sportdom's best dressers.

Dots and Dashes.

Before sailing for London on the Aquitania last week, Auriol Lee was engaged by A. Raymond Gallo to direct "The King's Breakfast," by Rita Weiman and Maurice Marks . . . So Helen Hoerle, most dynamic of the distaff publicists, tells me . . . Robert M. McBride & Co., announce a prize contest in connection with Warwick Deeping's new novel, "Marriage by Conquest" . . . Ten awards will be made for the best answers to this question: "If 'Marriage by Conquest' were to made into a motion picture, what Hollywood personalities would you select to play the three main characters? Give reasons." . . . Don't ask to borrow my copy, because I do not own the book! . . . The Theater Group of the Federal Bureau of Investigation will present Valentine Davies' "Three Times the Hour" at Roosevelt Friday night . . . Clarence W. Moore will direct, with John Hurley, Clayton Braathen and Fordyce Lyman in the cast . . . All took part in "The Game of Chess," winner of the last one-act play tournament . . . When Estelle Wentworth puts on Gilbert and Sullivan's "Gondoliers" at Roosevelt Thursday night, half of the dual title will be played by Eugene Kressin . . . One of the better local make-believers, Gene is chief villain of the Roadside Theater's melodrama group . . . Also is leading man with the Washington Players . . . Harry Wheaton Howard is director of "Luana," the twenty-fifth semiannual production of the Opera-Players Club of Immaculate Conception Church . . . Performances tonight, Thursday and Friday . . . So Jan Garber also is a Hoosier? . . . No wonder I like his music!

Five Children Drowned.

Kursk, Russia, April 20 (AP).—Five children, all under 12 years of age, drowned today after an overloaded boat, carrying them from school to their homes on collective farms, sank in the Oka River. Farmers, diving in the river, saved 11 children.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

The Gossipel Truth.

Hollywood, April 20, 1936.

DARRYL ZANUCK, according to his 20th Century-Fox contract, isn't supposed to play polo . . . Norma Shearer was given a charm for her bracelet by Mrs. Leslie Howard . . . The charm is a miniature with an eight-point "Romeo and Juliet" made of diamonds and rubies . . . Louis Hayward claims that he can't resist Ida Lupino because she writes "such nice poetry to him." The picture of the girl at the bottom of the glass in which old-fashions are served at the leading bars in town is Margaret Lynam, a "Great Ziegfeld" cutie . . . Although he didn't receive screen credit, it was Allan Jones who sang "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody." Stanley Morner, also a good singer, is photographed making the gestures . . . Robert Benchley, who has been on the wagon, arrived in Hollywood to make a picture. He was immediately assigned to the flicker "We Go to College," to play the role of a drunk.

IDA LUPINO

The other evening at John Otterson's party, Jim Crow, one of the movie town's best cinema critics, began to talk about writers . . . He said to me: "After I saw 'Waiting for Lefty,' I was excited. Here was a piece of writing. I envied that fellow, Clifford Odets. He's a writer who knows where he wants to go and works at it . . . As for me, what do I do? play cards . . . That's my big vice—playing cards . . . I never sit down to write. Always cards . . . Last night I was playing poker and in the middle of the game I got disgusted . . . I tossed in my cards and my chips and I shouted: 'I'm through. What is Odets doing now?'" I interrupted. "Do you want to know, truthfully, what Odets was doing last night? . . . He was at my house playing poker." ... ...

Marlene Dietrich has purchased a rowing machine and she goes cruising in her parlor to keep her figure trim . . . Eleanor Whitney's big romance these days and nights is Snowden Hunt, jr. . . . Warners are trying to borrow Clark Gable for the Marion Davies flicker, "Cain and Abel." Mary Garden is now blonde . . . Lili Damita is going to make a personal appearance tour . . . An amusing yarn is told about the beautiful Beverly Hills postoffice, an impressive building . . . A fortune was spent to erect it and it was given every modern detail—but they left out a slot for the two-cent letters . . . Mrs. James Cagney is giving tap dancing lessons to Joan Blondell and Dick Powell . . . Luise Rainer was being interviewed by a Hollywood correspondent the other afternoon while on the set of the flicker, "The Good Earth." . . . "Is this your first picture?" asked the interviewer . . . Miss Rainer thought she was being ribbed, but continued to be polite . . . "No," she answered. "I played in 'Rendezvous' and 'The Great Zeigfeld'—which had a big premiere here, quietly."

The Mayfair party Saturday night was not as gay as the previous affair . . . Joan Bennett was a lovely hostess. Cary Grant had practically every dance with Mary Brian, and Virginia Bruce was there without Cesar Romero . . . The highlight of the evening was to be lyrics of a song flashed on a screen, and the audience was to join in the singing . . . But the wrong film arrived, a Paramount short, and the audience hissed . . . An English duke wanted to marry Patricia Wilder . . . Pat said: "You go back to England and come back and see me when you're a king."

Mae West's flicker, "Klondike Annie," is having censor trouble with the Chinese government . . . Wendy Barrie and James Stewart, since they completed their picture, "Speed," have been playing their scenes at the Trocadero . . . Lillian Hellman is writing the screen play of "Dead End." The picture will show the grownups as kids and then will show the kids on the block when the gangster, grown up, returns . . . Shirley Temple now knows a great many of the newspapermen by their names, and gives them a big greeting when she sees them . . . The scenario of the critics' prize play, "Winterset," is completed and almost ready for production at Radio Pictures. Maxwell Anderson's black verse has been retained only in certain sections . . . The scenario has two endings, the original of the play and a happy one . . . Which is to be used will be decided later . . . Tom Jenk heard a chorine complain and sigh for the good old days of the "Butter an Eggman" mother used to make.

The one screen in "The Great Ziegfeld" that Billie Burke objected to was that in which Luise Rainer, portraying Anna Held, phones Ziegfeld, played by William Powell, to congratulate him on his marriage to Billie Burke, played by Myrna Loy . . . This scene was not in at the first preview at Oakland . . . Several days after the Broadway premiere of this picture, George White received a phone call from his lawyer, Abe Berman . . . White was sitting in his room in the Warwick Hotel, which faces the Ziegfeld Theater . . . This is the setting of Ziegfeld's final scene in the picture . . . White asked Berman what he thought of "The Great Ziegfeld." . . . Berman replied: "I believe it's the greatest entertainment I ever saw." . . . White answered: "You know I'm sitting in that same hotel looking across the street at the theater. The same thing could happen to me."

Soldier Put to Death.

Lyon, France, April 20 (AP).—Brahimi Rabah, an Algerian soldier, was put to death by a firing squad today for killing a noncommissioned officer, who ordered him confined to quarters.

Bound and blindfolded, Rabah was led to a post, where he was forced to kneel before the volley of shots ended his life.

Super Sculps Star Between Scenes

On the occasion of her fiftieth appearance in the Martin Beck Theater, New York, in the title role of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan," Katharine Cornell was presented with a miniature head of herself as Joan, modeled by Hudson Shotwell, pictured with her above, one of the supernumeraries in the company. Observing the actress closely while he was on stage with her, the young sculptor-super then would rush to his dressing room and work on his clay from memory. Miss Cornell seems definitely pleased with the result.

Those Federal Thespians.

Betty Rice (C), Navy Department, will play the leading role in the Studio of Theater Arts' production, "The Late Christopher Bean," to be presented at Wardman Park Theater April 28 and 29. Other Government people having prominent roles are Karl Gay, Capitol, and Elinor Evans, Government Printing Office. Constance Connor Brown (F) is directing.

Agriculture Bridge Club.

A vulnerable no-trump little slam was bid and made by H. A. Leibensperger and Ethel E. Terry (C) in the ARA Bridge Club of Agriculture at its last session. First prize went to V. B. Bonney and Philip Krupen and second to Dan Dahle and Mrs. June Hodgkins. A grand slam in hearts, not vulnerable, was bid and made by Mrs. Frank Curran and Mrs. T. S. Stone.

300th Lodge Reported.

National offices of the American Federation of Government Employes reported last night the receipt of the 300th application for a charter of groups of Federal employes. The new lodge, No. 300, is composed of WPA employes at Trinidad, Colo.

The A. F. G. E. was founded in September, 1932. Charleston, S. C., Lodge, No. 100, was chartered early in 1934 and War Department Lodge, No. 200, at Chicago in June, 1935. In addition to the 300 lodges of Federal employes, the A. F. G. E. reports it has 83 lodges of city, county and State employes.

Culbertson on Bridge

"Dear Mr. Culbertson: I have followed your column with great interest and have noticed that, from time to time, you act as referee in bridge disputes submitted to you for decision.

"Well, last night my husband and I sat down to our weekly brawl—pardon me, I meant contract game—and to every one's astonishment except the neighbors' a terrific argument developed over a certain hand. I am writing this letter at my husband's bedside (nothing serious; he'll be up and around in no time) and with his full approval.

"The hand that caused the accident was this:

"North, dealer.

"Both sides vulnerable.

♥ A 4
♦ K 7 5 3

WEST
♠ K Q J 4
♥ 10 9 2
♦ 9 6 2

EAST
♠ 10 5 2
♥ J 9 7 6
♣ J 10 9 7

SOUTH
♠ A 9 7
♦ A Q J 10

"The bidding:

North.	East.	South.	West.
1 club	Pass	3 no trp	Pass
4 no trp	Pass	5 no trp	Pass
6 clubs	Pass	6 no trp	Pass
Pass	Pass

"Of course, there were only 11 tricks in the hand at no trump, whereas six diamonds (which never even were mentioned) would have been easy.

"I was North, my moronic helpmete was South (but not far enough south!). I claim he bid the hand like a first-class goop. He claims (though more feebly than last night) that his bidding was correct throughout.

"Who is right? May I beg that you rush your answer, as I fear dear husband is going to have a relapse if he keeps up this argument. Anxiously yours,

"MRS. H. K. W., Detroit, Mich."

I sometimes wish that all of my correspondents were masculine. It is a thankless enough task to act as umpire in an argument between two men. The feminine element not only complicates a problem by bringing in such extraneous factors as the personal history, physiognomy, and imbecility of the masculine partner, but there always is the horrible chance that the woman may be right!

To my infinite distress I must decide in her favor this time. South's bidding was not good and six diamonds would have been the logical contract.

But—and now I shudder to think what will happen to the already hors du combat Mr. H. K. W.—the six no trump contract should have been made!

Undoubtedly West opened the spade king and if declarer had conceded the first trick the other twelve would have been indefensibly his. His one chance, since he had only 11 top tricks, was a squeeze. This depended on only one condition: That the same opponent had the long hearts and clubs. After passing the first spade lead South should win the second and run the diamond suit. That would account for six cards played by all hands, leaving only seven. Since the player guarding hearts and clubs would require four cards in each, obviously he would be squeezed.

I can only hope that I am not making myself an accessory to manslaughter!

Nationals Divide With Red Sox; Drop First, 6-5, Then Win, 6-2

Brown Wins Marathon at Boston

Time Is 2:33:40.8; Indian Victory by Breaking Stride.

Winner's Time 2:33:40 Falters Near Finish; Kelly Is Third.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 20.—Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, of Providence, R. I., one of the few remaining Narragansett Indians, qualified for the United States Olympic team by winning the fortieth Boston A. A. marathon today.

The full-blooded brave, after being challenged five times by the pre-race favorite, Johnny Kelley, of Arlington, last year's winner, during the last 5 miles of the 26 miles 385 yards 1936's Olympic initial final tryout, led another sturdy challenger, the veteran Bill McMahon, of Worcester, to the finish line by almost two minutes.

Brown broke the tape in 2:33:40 4-5. He led almost all of the way from the starting line on the little lane in Hopkinton and missed wiping out the 2:31:01 3-5 course record set by Les Pawson, of Pawtucket, R. I., in 1933, because he ran himself to the verge of collapse to lead the pack during the first 20 miles.

With five to go the pre-race favorite, Kelley, the Arlington florist and last year's winner, wiped out a three-minute deficit and pulled into a 3-yard lead over the Rhode Island Indian.

They changed position four times more, never by more than 3 yards. Brown suddenly spurted away from the 1935 champion, who faltered when the pressure was the greatest.

After Kelley was eliminated, McMahon forced his way into second place. The latter was handed the victory on a platter about 3 miles from the finish line, when Brown slowed down to a walk. McMahon, however, came almost to a dead stop when he saw Brown staggering and reeling 100 yards ahead of him.

Favorites Win in Play For Handball Crown

Favorites survived the first round of the tenth annual Y. M. C. A. handball championships last night.

Only three matches were played in the class A singles. G. J. Finley defeated J. Mammano, 21-7, 21-10; Sam Robbin won from L. C. Moore, 21-18, 14-21, 21-4; L. Ziller turned back Dan Arnold, 21-20, 21-10, and Jack Schwartz took Sam Wolfe, 21-10, 21-8.

Browns Lose Zero Rating, Beat Tigers

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 20.—A six-run onslaught in the eighth inning today shelled three Detroit pitchers, including Schoolboy Rowe, from the mound and gave the St. Louis Browns their first victory of the season, 9 to 6. Pete Fox hit a home run for the Tigers in the sixth.

Kennedy Stops Tribe as Sox Win, 5-1

Wins Mound Duel With Hildebrand, Giving Up Eight Hits.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 20.—Vernon Kennedy held the Cleveland Indians to four hits today and the White Sox romped home with their fourth victory of the season, 5 to 1.

More than 6,000 fans saw the young righthander win a pitchers' duel from Oral Hildebrand, who held the Sox to eight hits, but lost because they were bunched. It was Kennedy's first appearance against the Indians since he pitched his no-hit, no-run game against them last August 31 in Chicago.

Bokina to Hurl Against Red Sox Today

Rookie to Make Initial Big League Start; Batting Changes.

Boston, April 20.—Elated at the success today of Pete Appleton, Manager Bucky Harris tonight nominated Joe Bokina, another of his second flight pitchers for duty against the Red Sox tomorrow.

The game will see Bokina making his first start in the big leagues and, pradoxically, facing one of the gamest greats—Lefty Grove who is slated to pitch for the Red Sox. The right-handed rookie from Albany has made only one appearance in the box for the Nats this season, a three-inning relief shift in which he was not overly impressive, but with Jimmy De Shong ill in Philadelphia, Manager Bucky Harris is hard pressed for starting pitchers.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, Mass., April 20.

Up here in Boston town, where the populace is more than mildly daffy on the subject of the golden-stitched Red Sox and their pennant gestures, the absence of Manager Joe Cronin from the line-up is evoking neither sorrow nor excitement.

You might even say that the general reaction here is one of politely silent satisfaction. The folks don't go so far as to publicly gloat over the accident that removed Manager Cronin from the shortstop job with the Red Sox last week, but there is not even a murmur of regret to be heard.

POVICH.

The $250,000 shortstop, you see, is something less than a terrific idol here in Boston, despite his Irish monicker and his equally Irish countenance. Time was when any Irishman had an awful bulge with the fans in this bit of transplanted Erin, but Boston fans have undergone a change in character during these last two years that Tom Yawkey has been nursing 'em on pennant contenders.

They are scenting the pennant up here this year and they're not particular how they get it—whether it be the work of Irishers or Buddhists. The championship-starved town is rapidly losing its clannishness and is willing to take into its heart most any guy who will go out there and win ball games for 'em.

So, when Cronin broke his thumb in two places the other day there was a great outburst of indifference and a general inquiry that sounded very much like "what of it?" Cronin hadn't been doing the team much good anyway out there at shortstop where his errors were giving the populace a severe case of apprehension, and anything that removed him from the line-up was just simply a case of personal tough luck—for Cronin.

As a matter of fact, the more rude of the folks up here are blaming even Cronin's injury on his own bunglesome play. They do say that if Cronin had played that particular ball when Higgins came barging into second base he never would have gotten himself hurt, but he juggled that ball and consequently had to tag the runner while off balance and thus was asking for the accident.

Boston fans learned last year that the man they were ready to accept as their idol was susceptible to feet of clay. Long before midseason they were unloosing their boos against him every time he muffed a ground ball and on one occasion the razzberry crop was so abundant that Mrs. Cronin, in great disgust, left the park. Cronin's old bugaboo, his weakness on slow balls hit directly at him, which in Washington, had been the only flaw in his play, has continued to haunt him here.

And by the grapevine route this department learns that Cronin's subordinates on the Red Sox are secretly pleased with the present state of affairs that finds the $250,000 beauty managing the club from the bench. With Eric McNair in there playing shortstop, things appear to be moving a deal more smoothly in the infield.

The Red Sox, it seems, are not underestimating their chances to win that pennant and cash in on the players' cut of the World Series gate. For any little thing that will contribute to their success, such as the substitution of McNair for Cronin appears to be doing, they are truly grateful, although politeness stills their tongue on this particular matter.

As far as the McNair angle of the Red Sox goes, the idea appears not to have been Cronin's but General Manager Eddie Collins'. Out in Chicago at the winter meeting, where reports were rife that the Red Sox were considering the purchase of Foxx, Marcum, Cramer and McNair, Cronin admitted the possibility that a deal would be made but laughed off the McNair angle.

"What would we want with McNair?" Cronin asked Boston newspapermen at that time, "I think I can hold down the shortstop job on this club."

But General Manager Collins apparently had other ideas and seemingly put them across with Owner Tom Yawkey. Anyway, at an outlay of some $30,000 or $40,000 extra, the Red Sox included McNair in the deal for easily obvious reasons and Cronin found himself with a shortstop he had not bargained on.

The entire Cronin case will forever remain one of baseball's deepest mysteries. The young Irishman from Frisco was for three years, hand-running at Washington, the league's greatest shortstop entitled to mention in the same breath with the hallowed Hans Wagner. He could hit like hell, he was positively sensational in the field and he came closer to being worth his $250,000 price tag than probably any other player in the business.

Somehow, somewhere along the trail a goodly measure of his talents deserted Cronin, who at 29 appears already over the crest. But the guy is still smiling—perhaps to keep his courage up and perhaps in an honest conviction that he's gonna come back.

Mader Is Victor Over Nichy At Arena

Crowd Boos Decision at Finish of Bristling 8-Round Battle.

Eddie Mader, long a ranking heavyweight, was on the right end of what many thought was a bit of wrong deciding by the official arbiters at Turner's Arena last night as he was awarded a unanimous decision over Billy Nichy, the Pittsburgh pinwheel, after eight rounds of cocktail lounge brawling.

Matched to have it out with light-heavyweight champion John Henry Lewis in Chicago a week from tomorrow night, Nichy lost little, if any, local prestige with the decision. A majority of the crowd of 2,000 greeted the award to Mader with hoots of derision and Nichy got one of the biggest hands of the current season as he slumped dejectedly from the fighting pit.

The fight was a battle between Mader's highly effective left hook and Nichy's potent right uppercut throughout. As early as the third round, Billy had Mader out on his feet from a beautifully placed right uppercut to the chin, but he was unable to apply the finishing touches as Eddie ducked and blocked away from harm instinctively.

As the fight wore on, Nichy seemed to tire. Then Mader got in his telling licks. He rocked Nichy with left hooks to the head and pummeled his midsection at close quarters, as Billy apparently as at a loss as how to defend himself.

Nichy always was the knockout threat—a threat that probably would have materialized against a less experienced fighter than Mader. His right uppercuts, when they landed, packed the authority of a

Yankee Stadium Is Selected For Louis-Schmeling Battle

New York, April 20.—Max Schmeling, the man who was, and Joe Louis, the Negro who would be heavyweight champion of the world, will battle 15 rounds in the Yankee Stadium Thursday night, June 18.

After days of apparent indecision, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced definitely today the bout would be held in the enlarged stadium and that he was calling off all negotiations aimed at transferring the match to some other city, Philadelphia, San Diego, Calif., and Cleveland, among others.

Jacobs predicted the bout would gross $1,500,000 and draw aggregate attendance of better than 90,000.

Construction of additional seating facilities designed to provide accomodations for a crowd up to 100,000 for boxing already is under way at the stadium. Jacobs said, however, that a bowl would be erected within the stadium so that except for the press ringside section all seats would be elevated. He was willing, he said, to sacrifice some part of potential seating capacity in the interests of the customers.

Jacobs timed his announcement to coincide with the arrival of Schmeling, the Teuton puncher, from Germany on the Bremen tomorrow. Louis will arrive from the Midwest on Wednesday.

Voigt Regains Place On Walker Cup Team

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 20.—The United States will defend the Walker Cup, prized team trophy of amateur golf, against Great Britain's challenge this summer with one of the youngest squads in the history of cup competition.

The personnel of the 1936 squad, announced today by the United States Golf Association includes six shotmakers who never previously have been selected for cup play. Five others, with at least one international trophy competition behind them, were named to the squad which will oppose the British at Pine Valley in Clementon, N. J., September 2 and 3.

Uncle Sam's side again will be captained by Francis Ouimet, of Boston, veteran of the first eight matches of the series started in 1922. Ouimet served in a like capacity two years ago, when the contests were played at St. Andrews. Whether Ouimet will play or function as advisory head is up to himself, U. S. G. A. officials said.

The other members of the team are George Dunlap, jr., and George Voigt, of New York, and one-time Washington, D. C., public links star, Albert (Scotty Campbell and Harry Givan, of Seattle; Reynolds Smith, of Dallas, Tex.; Ed White, of Bonham, Tex.; Johnny Goodman, of Omaha; Johnny Fischer, of Cincinnati; Walter Emery, of Oklahoma City, and Charley Yates, of Atlanta.

Besides Ouimet, Dunlap, Voigt, Goodman and Fischer have been members of past teams. Voigt played in 1930-32; Dunlap, 1932-34, and Goodman, the 1933 National Amateur champion, and Fischer in 1934.

Emery clinched a berth last September when he pressed Lawson Little in the final round of the National Amateur championships at Cleveland. Beaten 4 and 2, Emery carried the fight to Little all the way and succumbed only when the husky Californian sealed the match with a birdie and an eagle on the last two holes. Since Little joined the professional ranks a fortnight ago some experts have labelled Emery his most likely successor as amateur champion.

Making a comeback last year, Voigt reached the quarter-finals of the National Amateur before suffering elimination at the hands of Little. Givan, a long hitter from the tees and holder of the Pacific Northwest title, was put out in the fourth round at Cleveland by Jack Munger in a 19-hole battle.

A's Take 12-11 Game From Yankees

Macks Take Season's First Contest; Team Shows Old-Time Form.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, April 20 (AP).—Looking like the A's of old as far as their hitting was concerned, the Philadelphia Athletics came through with their first victory of the season today, outslugging the New York Yankees for a 12-to-11 decision.

The Mackmen hammered Walter Brown, who pitched the first five innings, and Bump Hadley, who finished up, for 14 hits, including a home run by George Puccinelli in the seventh, when the Athletics scored four times to tie the score. They built up an early lead but Carl Doyle was unable to hold the advantage and it took a pinch single by Loville (Chubby) Dean, with the bases loaded in the ninth, to produce the deciding tally. George Turbeville held the Yanks to four hits and a pair of runs the last five and one-third innings.

Five-Run Rally in Ninth Gives Cards 8-7 Game

St. Louis, April 20 (AP).—A 5-run rally in the ninth inning, featured by Frankie Frisch's double and Joe Medwick's single, gave the St. Louis Cardinals an 8-to-7 victory today over the Cincinnati Reds. The rally gave Dizzy Dean his first victory of the season.

Lovely Girl Is Triumphant in Havre de Grace Feature Sprint

Whips Seven Sprinters in Dash

Mutuel Pays Off $7.20; Smith Rides Both Ends of Daily Double.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 20.—Eight gals marched postward today in the feature race, dubbed "Three Men on a Horse," and Lovely Girl proved a sweet thing for those who backed her chances. Picking up her skirts entering the stretch, the daughter of Vito and Loveliness, went skipping to the imaginary wire a length in advance of Genie Palatine. Two lengths farther back came Ampersand to collect third money.

Lovely Girl provided her friends with a $7.20 mutuel while running in the silver and red bars of the Bomar Stable. The six furlongs were run in 1:12 4-5, creditable time.

Jockey Eddie Smith, of Washington, and Trainer J. P. Jones made a personal affair out of the daily double. Jones sent a pair of fit horses to the post and Smith gave each an excellent ride to leave no doubt as to the winner in either case. After Broad Ripple had taken the first race, Smith came back to guide Deflate home by the best part of a city block to put the finishing touches on a $12.40 pay-off.

Despite an ordinary card, a crowd of some 8,000 turned out for the Monday afternoon sport. The return of spring weather was enjoyed and customers in the sun were carrying their coats and wraps.

Those who bet Lovely Girl and were not aware of her stretch ability groaned as she appeared next to last as the field of eight moved along the backstretch. Ampersand and Paraguay Tea sprinted into a battle for the pace-setting honor. Savings and Genie Palatine were running forwardly.

It was not until the turn for the stretch neared, that Jockey Bryson called upon Lovely Girl for a drive. She responded with a rush that sent her into contention. In the stretch, Ampersand and Paraguay Tea became leg weary and it was but a formality for Lovely Girl to take the purse. Genie Palatine, which put on a show going to the post by posing for a minute in frant of the odds board, was a smashing second.

Broad Ripple, ridden by Eddie Smith, the Washington boy, made a show of her field in the opening sprint juveniles. She took command during the opening furlong and drew far out in the stretch to win easily. Peace River was second and Robins Cove third. The race was fairly boiling over with tips but most of the backing was for C. V. Whitney's Zor and A. G. Vanderbilt's Sharpshooter. Broad Ripple paid $10.80.

The ancient Fervid came from far back in the field to take the second race at an $18.10 mutuel under a rousing ride by Jockey Bobby Merritt. Midnight Flyer was second and Hasty Belle third in the field of nine. Canterbow was the favorite and was given a terrible ride by Jockey J. Hunter. The horse broke in a tangle and Hunter did not stop pulling up until he was in the rear of the field.

Smith rode his second winner of the day on Deflate, owned and operated by J. P. Jones. It was a romp for the daughter of Meridian, which went out in front at once and won with speed in reserve. Twobob was second and Patsey Be Gone third in the group of seven contesting over the 6-furlong course. Deflate paid $8.70.

Jockey Joe Renick rode his first winner of the Maryland season aboard Sparky in the fifth race. The veteran mare had too much stretch punch for Idle Along and Hoops.

Mrs. Noble J. Waldron Named Golf Captain

Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, president of the Women's District of Columbia Golf Association, yesterday announced the appointment of Mrs. Noble J. Waldron, of Beaver Dam, as captain of the District first-team matches.

Mrs. Waldron succeeds Mrs. B. C. Hartig, of Manor, who resigned because of illness.

In her new capacity Mrs. Waldron will be in full charge of the association team matches during the season. Formerly she was golf chairman at Beaver Dam and first vice president of the District association.

Rides 'Double'

EDDIE SMITH, Washington boy, who rode Broad Ripple and Deflate to victories for a $120.40 daily double at Havre De Grace.

Mader Decisions Nichy in Hard Bout

Joe Louis wallop, but Eddie always was able to keep him from landing the follow-up punches that might have ended the swathed swapping ahead of schedule.

While he had his steam Nichy seemed well able to neutralize Mader's free-wheeling swinging. After he began to slow down he became an increasingly easy target and toward the end Eddie was popping him almost at will.

On The Post's score sheet Mader's stirring finish failed to earn him better than a draw. However, Nichy was given a disputed decision over last night's winner a few weeks ago, so it probably all evens up in the long run.

Johnny Daniels, a freakish Baltimore heavyweight, scored a fifth-round knockout over Kirk Burk, of Washington, in a preliminary scheduled for six rounds. The bout started out as a very hilarious glove-waving contest, but soon developed into a first-class bit of entertainment. Burk had staggered Daniels with several rights to the head when he caught a right and left to the head which sent him down for the full count after 2 minutes and 50 seconds.

Johnny Dean, the bounding Irisher from Charlotte, N. C., and young Raspi, a Baltimore lightweight, went six rounds to a draw in an exciting semifinal. The Post's score sheet showed Dean in front by a slight margin at the finish, but the deciders decided they were even-stephen, thus paving the way for a return match.

Frankie Litt, a Dempsey lightweight protege, and Bobby Dechter, from Philadelphia, worked six rounds to a draw in a gruelling nip-and-tuck preliminary. First one fighter then the other would pop into a slight lead, but at the finish they were so close that one of the official arbiters voted the contest to Litt, another to Dechter and the third cast the die by ordaining the contest a stalemate.

Joe Doty, Washington's most pleasing club fighter, took a split decision from Angelo Meola, Baltimore welterweight, in a fast and furious four-round curtain-raiser.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROAD RIPPLE, $10.80, $8.30, $4.60; PEACE RIVER, $6.30, $3.80; ROBIN'S COVE (entry), $8.90.

BROAD RIPPLE began quickly, had good speed to take command going to the turn, met a strong bid from PEACE RIVER entering the homestretch, then drew out smartly during the stretch drive after bearing out. PEACE RIVER, a keen factor in the early stages, was no match for the winner after making a bold effort at the stretch turn. ROBIN'S COVE circled her field and finished full of run. SHARPSHOOTER, holding a forward position early, failed to menace after saving a lot of ground entering the homestretch when the leaders swung wide. OVERPLAY finished stoutly after beginning slowly. ZOR broke sluggishly and raced green. He finished fast when settled in his stride. FLYING TRAPEZE was held safe. MATTAPONY was steered wide all the way. HAPPY HOSTESS was shuffled back after going a furlong.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:03. Winner, Mrs. J. M. PORTEVER	(McComba)	87	8	8	9	9	9	9	141.30

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FERVID, $18.10, $5.80, $5.80; MIDNIGHT FLYER, $5.00, $4.60; HASTY BELLE, $22.10.

FERVID, outrun for the first half-mile, improved her position on the outside, finished determinedly after reaching the homestretch and won going away after getting to the front in the last 70 yards. MIDNIGHT FLYER, prominent in the early racing, engaged the leaders midway of the homestretch and continued gamely until the close. HASTY BELLE, hard ridden all the way, closed gamely and outstayed TITIAN KIDDIE. Latter disposed of FIRE STAR when leaving the backstretch, responded gamely when placed to punishment, but failed to rally nearing the finish. CANTER BOY broke slowly, saved ground, but could not reach contention at any stage. FIRE STAR showed speed for the first five furlongs. MAHI went well. CANDY MAN was never a factor.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Wilmington. For 3-year-old fillies. Start good from stall gates in chute. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:35½. Winner, J. P. Jones' ch. f. (3), by Meridian—Ha'penny. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:13 1-5.

MIXED GOODS	(Rosen)	105	1	7	7	7	7	7	7	77.95

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEFLATE, $8.70, $4.90, $2.90; TWO BOB, $3.90, $3.60; PATSEY BEGONE, $4.10.

DEFLATE, away well, showed good early speed to assume command at once, drew into a clear lead with ease, saved ground throughout, and was never threatened. TWO BOB lacked early speed, gradually worked her way up, wore down PATSEY BEGONE in the drive, but was no match for the winner. The latter subdued SPANK early and raced in closest attendance to the leader, gave way to the challenge of TWO BOB and was tiring at the end. SPANK had some early speed, dropped back entering the stretch, but came on again at the finish. BETH BON stopped badly. The others were never prominent.

DAILY DOUBLE (FIRST AND THIRD RACES) PAID $120.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Three Men on a Horse. For 3-year-old fillies (division of third race). Start good from stall gates in chute. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:08. Winner, Bomar Stable's b. f. (3), by Vito—Loveliness. Trained by R. E. Potts. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LOVELY GIRL, $7.20, $4.50, $3.30; GENIE PALATINE, $13.60, $6.70; AMPERSAND, $5.00.

LOVELY GIRL, slow as usual in the early racing, gradually bettered her position, came around the outside of the leaders through the stretch and was drawing away at the end. GENIE PALATINE raced evenly through the backstretch, moved up rapidly on the outside entering the stretch and closed stoutly. AMPERSAND had good early speed, but was made too much use of racing with PARAGUAY TEA and tired. The latter forced the fast early pace set by AMPERSAND and had little left when challenged. TIANA could never threaten. SAVINGS stopped after flashing some early speed.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:36. Off at 4:38. Winner, R. H. Heighe's b. m. (5), by Durbar II—Xenia. Trained by J. A. Bonifacio. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:48 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:41 2-5, 1:48 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARKY, $23.00, $9.10, $6.70; IDLE ALONG, $6.60, $4.90; HOOPS, $6.60.

SPARKY, reserved from the early pace, moved up stoutly between horses on the final turn, gradually wore down HOOPS and had enough left to hold IDLE ALONG safe. The latter, always a forward factor, raced within easy reach of the leader throughout, closed stoutly to drive on to HOOPS, but could not withstand the bid of the winner. HOOPS, reserved early, was sent up on the outside very fast midway of the backstretch, assumed command, saved ground to the finish, but was tiring. MAD PRUMP trailed the field in the early racing, came to the outside entering the stretch and finished stoutly. CORUM was forced to race in close quarters on the inside throughout. POMPOSITY flashed a little early speed, but dropped back steadily while having no excuses.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward (divided). Start good and fast from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:11. Off at once. Winner, Miss A. Booker's b. g. (5), by Sun God II—Danceaway. Trained by F. Booker. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14 4-5, 1:41 3-5, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN WAY, $7.90, $5.00, $3.40; APATHY, $5.90, $4.50; POPO, $3.60.

SUN WAY, beginning slowly, worked his way up on the inside when reaching the backstretch, engaged the leaders midway of the final turn, wore APATHY down when straightened into the homestretch and continued stoutly to the end. APATHY followed SUN WAY closely early, took command when leaving the backstretch, but could not withstand the winner when the final test came. POPO, kept on the outside to obtain racing room, improved his position gradually, but could not threaten the first two. POST BRIGADE had a rough passage going to the first turn, then circled his field to close a good gap. PATIENT SAINT lacked early speed and was held safe. PLAYOFF was used up racing in chase of BAY DROP. DEARZIE failed to rally after racing forwardly. WISHING STAR had a roush trip. SAINTED stopped, as did BAY DROP.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward (division of sixth race). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:43. Winner, J. Lockwood Jr. or br. g. (3), by Hand Grenade—Island Fairy. Trained by J. Dolan. Value to winner, $625; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24, 0:49 1-5, 1:15, 1:42, 1:48 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JAMUL, $15.60, $6.30, $3.80; ABBOT'S LAST, $3.50, $2.90; DALMATIA, $4.60.

JAMUL had good early speed to set the pace, gave way to the challenge of DALMATIA and ABBOT'S LAST through the stretch, but came again between horses under vigorous handling and just got up. ABBOT'S LAST, reserved from the leaders in the early racing, moved up stoutly on the outside on the final turn, disposed of DALMATIA and just failed to last. DALMATIA, well up from the start, assumed command on the final turn, but weakened. PLAYMORE lacked early speed, gradually bettered his position and closed full of run. THREE DAGGERS was never prominent. BENDER FIRST stopped after showing some speed. SLEEK was crowded back at the first turn and refused to extend herself thereafter.

Havre de Grace Race Track, Md., April 20.

Dear Al:

Trainer Joe pops up with a fair wise crack once in a while. Like the majority of the watch toters here, Joe is looking for a juvenile to beat Goldey F, winner of six straight. When Eddie Smith rode Broad Ripple home in today's opener, one of the pressbox hounds, probably a rubber, remarked, "there's one that will give Goldey F a fit." Without looking to see where the noise came from, Joe yelled "Why, Goldey can pull the covered wagon and beat that thing." Charles Town may have to worry along without Eddie Smith's riding this summer. Eddie, who has always been a good jockey, but has been unable to sell his ability to a big stable, has found a stanch supporter in Trainer J. P. (Doc) Jones and to hear Jones tell it, Smith needs only to keep in present form and his half-mile track days are over. Eddie is one of those fortunate boys who never is bothered by weight problems and is stronger than he appears to be. Somebody said today, "every time I see Bejshak ride it makes me marvel at what a great horse Discovery must have been."

BILL.

First race—Jeanne Fetzko may find this company to her liking. She had little chance last out and I'm going to string along. Slump, from the Vanderbilt barn, is not much of a horse, but may be at home among these. Vivola to take care of the others.

National Security Upsets Hibbs in Bankers League Inaugural

Baroni Wins Duel With Garvey

Score Is 3-2; Fleming Officiates; Riggs Nine Is Defeated.

By John R. Vosburgh.

A little thing like a pulled ligament failed to keep Robert V. (Bob) Fleming, president of the American Bankers Association, from throwing out the first ball opening the Bankers Baseball League season yesterday.

The broad-shouldered financier limped on the scene at the south Ellipse with a cane, then tossed it aside and fired a strike over the middle of the plate to start the opening game between W. B. Hibbs and National Savings. Some of the fans said President Fleming showed some of his 1921 form when he pitched for Riggs Bank, of which he is now president.

Marking the start of the third successive year of The Washington Post Sandlot Association championships, the Bankers League drew some 100 fans to the two opening contests. The Hibbs-National Security battle brought an upset right off the bat, as it were, the championship Hibbs team losing a 3-to-2 decision.

In the other opener, American Security and Trust routed Riggs, 14 to 1, as young Orlando Birch, Ballston, Va., boy, held the Riggs crew to two hits.

The National Security battle saw each team rather weak at bat, getting three hits apiece and some of them of the scratch variety. The pitchers' battle between Frank Baroni, of Hibbs, and lanky Joe Garvey, of National Savings, featured as much wildness as fast-ball pitching, none of the five runs scoring on hits.

Odie Hilleary, former Western High player, scored the first run. The National Savings catcher beat out a hit off Baroni's glove, advanced on an infield out and a passed ball and scored when Catcher Ballinger threw wildly to second.

Hibbs took a 2-1 lead when Neal Wells, Savings second sacker, dropped Henning's pop-fly with two out and the bases full as the result of three bases on balls by the erratic Garvey. Al Adrian, of National Savings, singled cleanly in the second half of the inning and scored the winners' second run eventually on a passed ball.

Nationals Divide Two With Red Sox

start toward victory in that first game when Bluege muffed Werber's grounder in the second inning and eventually scored on Rick Ferrell's single after Millies' low-throw had helped him to steal second.

But the 2-0 lead the Red Sox held was wiped out by the Nats in the sixth and seventh when they began to pummell Rube Walberg after five scoreless innings. Linke evened the score with his homer in the seventh and the Nats went out in front, 5-2 in the eighth, when Myer singled, Travis tripled to right, knocking Walberg from the box. Reynolds greeted Joe Cascarella with a single that scored Travis and Kuhel greeted Fred Ostermueller with a double that scored Reynolds.

Jimmy Foxx's booming homer retrieved a run for the Sox in the same inning, and then came that awful ninth.

In the second game, while Appleton was whipping his overhand stuff across the plate with such swell effect, the Nats gained a full measure of revenge against one of their old tormentors, Johnny Welch.

The tall Boston right-hander was soundly thumped from the outset, the Nats scoring three runs in the first inning. A wild throw by Melillo launched the uprising. Myer followed with a single to center, Werber muffed Powell's grounder and Travis scored two runners with a sharp single to center. A third scored on Reynolds' infield out.

The Nats bounced back with another run in the second which was a sole effort by Johnny Stone, who wallaped a tremendous line drive into the dead centerfield bleachers for a home run—the first ever hit to that sector by a left-hander and the fifth such homer in the park's history.

In the seventh, the Nats boosted their margin to 6-0 after Bolton had led off with a single. Cascarella, who had relieved Welch in the sixth got two out and then filled the bases by walking Buddy Lewis and Buddy Myer. At this point Jake Powell rapped a single to center to score two of his pals.

Up to this point the Red Sox were having their difficulties with Appleton. For four innings they didn't get the semblance of a hit. And then Pinch-hitter Bing Miller singled to left with two out in the fifth only to be stranded. Thereafter, Appleton set 'em down with one lone hit per inning, but he lost his shut-out in the eighth when Travis made a wild throw on Almada's grounder and Cramer followed with a triple to right.

Keeler Victor In Play-Off For Cup

By Dave Herman.

Betty Keeler, slim little Indian Spring Club golfer, won the Phyllis Keeler Miller Memorial Trophy yesterday at Washington Golf and Country Club.

She defeated Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, in the 18-hole play-off for the honor, scoring 101-15—86 to her opponent's 102-13—89.

In the playoff for low gross prize, Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, runner-up for the District championship, scored a creditable 89 to beat out Mrs. F. G. Crisp, of Army and Navy, who shot a 105.

Miss Wheeler, former District municipal golf champion, was out in 50 and back in 51, while Miss Hacker had 52—50.

Miss Houghton's 42 on the incoming side showed only two sixes.

Billy Dettweiler, 18-year-old Georgetown University freshman, became the first amateur to break 70 at Congressional Country Club's long and testing course yesterday.

Dettweiler shot a 69, three under par, while playing with Charlie Pettijohn, and Lou Ferrari, both of Georgetown.

Dettweiler went out in 36, one under par, after starting with a birdie four, and played the back side in two under. The Congressional star birdied the tenth, thirteenth, fifteenth and eighteenth, but three-putted the eleventh and twelfth.

His card:

Out..... 4 4 3 4 5 4 5 4 3—36
In..... 3 5 4 4 3 4 3 4 3—33—69

Two eagles in a row and a birdie on the same nine—that was the feat of Alan Burton, Army and Navy Country Club professional, who set a new record for the outgoing side at his course yesterday with a 32.

Four under par, Burton fired eagles on the first hole, where he knocked his drive within six inches of the 276-yard first hole, and the second, where his spoon second finished eight inches from the pin for a three. His birdie came on the seventh.

Card:

Out..... 2 3 3 5 5 4 2 4 4—32

Chevy Chase Golf Club will begin the defense of its first team championship in the District Women's Golf Association matches which will be held on three fronts today. Chevy Chase meets Indian Springs at 9:40 at Congressional. Columbia faces Manor, and Army and Navy opposes Congressional. Kenwood draws a bye.

Chevy Chase will have its 1935 team intact. Elizabeth Houghton, Mrs. Landra B. Platt, Louise Claytor, Mrs. Bishop Hill, Mrs. L. O. Cameron will be among the players from Chevy Chase competing today.

Second team matches are scheduled at Congressional and the third teams will meet at Woodmont.

East Potomac's spring tournament will be held the week of May 4. Harry Graham, manager, announced yesterday. Plans for the tournament will not be announced until after the meeting April 28 of the newly organized District Public Links Golf Association at East Potomac.

Willie Fox was declared winner of the week-end Kickers handicap tourney at the Argyle Golf Club; Fox shot 90-18, 72. Sidney Sherwood was second with 94-19, 75; Cromwell Warner next with 94-17, 77; Harry Wilson with 91-17, 74 tied with Merrell Whittlesey, who shot 84-10, 74, for the fourth prize.

McElvenny Survives Initial Test in Mason-Dixon Net Play

By the Associated Press.

White Suphur Springs, W. Va., April 20.—All seeded players, headed by Wilmer Allison, of Texas, easily moved through the first two rounds of the sixteenth annual Mason-Dixon tennis tournament today.

The Texas star drew a bye in the first round and in the second easily defeated A. N. Jitkow, of New York, 6—2, 6—1.

John Van Ryn, of Elkins Park, Pa., another of the seeded group, bested R. Pollard, 6—4, 6—2, in his first round match, then had things all his own way over Fred West, Lynchburg, Va., winning in the second round, 6—1, 6—4.

Results for other seeded players:

Donald Budge, Oakland, Calif., won first round by default from Hugh Strange, and second, 6—2, 6—4, from W. Hall.

Wilmer Hines, Los Angeles, defeated E. Killduff, New York, 6—1, 6—2, but had a tough time in the second round, winning from Tom Mangan, Washington, 1—6, 6—1.

Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, first round, bye; defeated David Grey, of West Virginia Wesleyan, 6—2, 6—2.

Hal Surface, jr., of Kansas City, first round, bye; defeated Charles Turner, of Roanoke, Va., 6—3, 7—5.

Of the other three Washington players entered, only one, Ralph McElvenny, former intelcollegiate doubles champion, survived the first and second round play.

McElvenny swept through his first round match with a 6—1, 6—3 victory over A. King, of Lewisburg, W. Va., and then eliminated Armand Bruneau, of Brooklyn, 6—2, 8—6.

Lawrence A. Baker, treasurer of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Washington lawyer, drew a first-round bye, then dropped his second round engagement, 7—5, 6—2, to W. B. Reese, of Atlanta. The seeded Bryan Grant ousted the fourth Washington man, J. Alben, 6—0, 6—1 in a second-round match.

City Duckpin Event Opens Tonight

The twenty-ninth annual tournament of the Washington City Duckpin Association will be launched tonight at the Arcadia alleys, when the first group of entries open the event which will see a near-record field of over 375 teams, 400 doubles and 600 singles go into competition for city duckpin laurles for a period of three weeks.

The event will include practically every top-notch bowler in the city, as well as a gala array of near-stars and lesser lights, all classed according to their averages in league competition.

The Columbia Heights League has been awarded the honor of opening the night's schedule with Louie Pantos, of the Grand Central Valet team, the only class a singles performer, taking drives with many lower-class entries at 7 o'clock.

The tournament will gain impetus Wednesday, when the District League stars battle for the class A team championship. Occidental Restaurant, the defending champion, will roll on the same alleys with Heurich Brewers, the club that recently whipped them for the league pennant.

Government Loop Opens Saturday

The right arm of the Attorney General of the United States, Homer S. Cummings, is undoubtedly being groomed these days for its ceremonial duty of throwing out the first ball of the United States Government baseball league season, Saturday at 2 p. m., when Metropolitan Police and Bureau of Investigation open their 1936 championship drive.

Attorney General Cummings will collaborate with a couple of brass bands and Fred Buchholz, league president, in giving the league its most elaborate send-off. Cummings-to-Buchholz will comprise the opening battery for one and possibly two pitches, if the photographers are dissatisfied with the first.

However, the game will be put on the air over WMAL at 2:30 p. m. in probably the first sandlot baseball broadcast. The Metropolitan Police Boys Band and the Holy Comforter Band will furnish the music from specially constructed stands.

Ring Fans Can Obtain Best Judging Advice

Boxing fans who are not quite certain of the proper way to fill out entries in The Post's Boxing Contest now may receive expert advice on the subject—and file their entries without bothering to post them in the mails by calling at the ticket office of Joe Turner or Goldie Ahearn.

The Turner ticket office is located in the Annapolis Hotel. Goldie Ahearn's is at Ninth and E streets northwest. Boxes have been installed at both points in which entries may be deposited. Attendants at both points, all of whom are experts on the subject of boxing, will be glad to explain any points on which you are not thoroughly posted regarding the contest.

File early and often, thus increasing your chances of winning the free trip to the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout in New York June 18.

REMARKS .....

NAME OF WINNER .....

NAME OF ENTRANT .....

ADDRESS OF ENTRANT .....

The Object.

To predict as closely as possible the official outcome of the Freddie Miller-Pete Sarron featherweight championship boxing bout to be held at Griffith Stadium May 11.

The Prizes.

First prize—One ticket, railroad transportation from Washington and hotel bill in New York for the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling bout to be held in June.

Second prize—One ticket to the Louis-Schmeling fight.

Third prize—One ticket to the same contest.

The Rules.

File your entry on the above coupon, or similar blank, showing just how you think the bout will end. If you think it will end in a knockout, mark the coupon thus, showing the round in which you believe it will end, the winner and the time of knockout. In case of a knockout, the entrant calling the winner and round will win. If two or more call the winner and round, the one coming nearest to the time of knockout will win. If two or more are tied on time, the contestant scoring the fight nearest to correctly in the rounds preceding the knockout will win.

If the bout goes the distance, the contestant whose total score most nearly approximates the average score struck by the referee and two judges at the Sarron-Miller bout will be declared the winner. In case of a tie, the contestant who has the greatest number of rounds scored correctly will be declared the winner.

All ties that cannot otherwise be broken will be decided on the time of receipt of your entry. All scoring must be done according to the rules and regulations of the District Boxing Commission. The commission rule on scoring reads as follows:

"Scoring shall be by the '5-point' system. The winner of any round is marked 5. The loser of any round is marked from '0.1' to '4.9.' When a round is even, each contestant is scored '5.'"

Employes of The Post and their relatives are not eligible to enter this contest.

Address all entries to "Boxing Contest Editor," The Washington Post.

Marblehead's Nine Loses To Tech

Visitors Defeated, 7-2, by 'Pick-Up' Team; Abe Fillah Bat Star.

The annual Washington invasion of the Marblehead (Mass.) High School baseball team opened disastrously yesterday afternoon on the South Ellipse where a motley uniformed Tech High crew welcomed the visitors to the city with a 7-2 defeat.

It was the second victory of the season for the hastily gathered together Tech team which appeared in some very ancient and bedraggled suits. The snappily dressed Bay Staters, however, proved that clothes do not even come close to making the ball player, and Tech, behind the six-hit pitching of West and Doonis, swiftly took the old ball game.

Joe Clemi, Tech's little lead-off man, opened proceedings with a lusty double in the first inning, one of his three hits. Catcher Whitey France took a walk and then Abe Fillah, Tech's lambasting leftfielder, pounded out a double to give Tech its first two runs.

Tech scored again in the second, two more in the third and two in the seventh, one of them a terrific home run by the same Fillah.

West held Marblehead to three hits in his four innings on the mound. The other three came off Doonis, who finally yielded a run in the seventh and another in the eighth. Coach Ed Foxley of Tech was so pleased with the showing of the Maroon team that he promised it brand new uniforms for the opening interhigh game with Central, Friday.

Auto Industry Maintains Lead In Trade Climb

Production This Year Is Estimated at 25% Above 1935.

New York, April 20.—Rising above the retardative influence that the harassments of the most unfavorable weather conditions in nearly a decade provided, the automobile industry has continued to maintain its position as the outstanding leader in the country's commercial expansion, Dun & Bradstreet say today. With sales during the final month close to the peak for the period, production for the first was in close alignment with the comparative 1935 figures, in spite of the advancement of the date of the initial offering of the year's new models and the heavy output of November and December.

With the beginning of the second quarter most of the manufacturers returned to five-day week schedules, as delivery reports for March revealed one of the strongest expansions in retail business in the trade's history.

Selling Peak Deferred.

Due to the enforced postponement of buying during the first quarter, the peak of the spring selling season has been set ahead to late May or early June, with less than the usual recession in prospect for the summer months, due to late ment of the veterans' bonus. This has caused an upward revision of the 1936 objectives that were marked out last fall.

The most conservative estimates have placed 1936 production of passenger cars, taxicabs, commercial vehicles, and trucks for the United States and Canada at 5,225,000, or an increase of 25 per cent over the 1935 total of 4,182,491 units. The latter represented a gain of 45 per cent from the 1934 total of 2,869,963 and 111 per cent from the 1933 figure of 1,985,909. It marked the sixth time in automobile history that annual output exceeded 4,000,000 units, according to a survey of the automobile industry, which has just been completed by Dun & Bradstreet.

Filipinos Protest New Sugar Quota

Manila, April 20 (AP).—Planters of the Confederation of Sugar Cane Associations adopted resolutions today favoring rejection of the increased sugar quota allowed the Philippines unless sugar is admitted to the United States free of duty.

Some leading sugar planters suggested acceptance of the excess quota and the payment of duty under protest. Others pointed out the Philippines used all but 30,000 short tons of the reserve over the regular Jones-Costigan quota for 1936, saying if the next crop is short the reserve may be insufficient to cover the regular quota.

Servel Lifts Rate On Common Stock

New York, April 20 (AP).—Directors of Servel, Inc., makers of compression refrigerators and other products, today increased the quarterly dividend on the common to 15 cents a share from 12½ cents.

The dividend is payable June 1 to stock of record May 20.

Du Pont Net $1.21; 85 Cents Year Ago

Wilmington, Del., April 20 (AP).—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., in a preliminary estimate today, reported earnings of $1.21 a common share for the first quarter, compared with 85 cents a share in the March, 1935, quarter.

Earnings included a dividend from its investment in General Motors Corporation equal to 45 cents on each share of du Pont common stock. This compares with earnings of $1.82 a share in the final quarter of 1935, which included a return on the General Motors investment amounting to about 90 cents on each share of du Pont common stock.

In the first quarter a year ago earnings of 85 cents a share on the common included dividends from its General Motors investment amounting to about 22½ cents on du Pont common stock.

Bar Silver at 45¾, ¾ of a Cent Higher

New York, April 20 (AP).—The price of imported bar silver advanced ¾ of a cent to 45¾ cents an ounce today, the highest price since January 17 of this year. Today's upturn follows a rise of ¼ of a cent last Friday, which was preceded by an advance in the price at London.

Silver circles attributed the rise in part to the expansion of buying for Indian and speculative accounts in London last week. Today's local buying was described as limited and as "probably temporary."

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent

Stocks, Disregarding Favorable Industrial News, Continue Decline.

New York, April 20.—Bonds were no better than steady and stocks developed further weakness in moderate trading. Stock turnover was small until toward the fag end of the session when a burst of selling lifted the volume and depressed prices further. Closing quotations were 1 to 3 points lower for many leading stocks on a turnover of around 1,700,000 shares, but the closing tone was better than that of an hour before. Silver spurted, cotton was steady and wheat dropped. May wheat closed 2⅛ cents lower at 99⅝ cents a bushel.

Belated taking of such profits as remained to those who care more about seeing the color of money than avoiding payment of heavy income taxes next year, the absence of supporting orders near the market for many stocks and the busy bears with their short orders gave the market another test in the afternoon, after a morning of moderate steadiness. Most stocks did not stand the test at all well, although the much-feared heavy selling volume was not uncovered. After an hour of so of much increased activity, with the ticker tape reporting sales several minutes after they had been made, the market regained some of its poise and the tone turned steadier. That was about the best that could be said for it.

Selling began near the opening with the railroad sector under fire. Enough success was had there to encourage operations elsewhere and in the heavy afternoon business the steel shares, which had been fairly strong in the early trading, also weakened. Losses among the railroad shares ranged from 1 to 4 points. Until that time some of the steels had moved up a point or so, but they later moved down just as much. As the selling push subsided toward the close, giving the ticker a chance to wipe out some of its deficit, the steels and the motors recovered from their worst prices. General Motors, Chrysler, Steel and Bethlehem were among the firmer stocks.

DuPont.

Interest was drawn to some individual performances. DuPont opened 2 points lower, recovered, and following publication of a good earnings statement for first quarter, dropped back to around the opening price. Columbian Carbon dropped 5 points to round out a fall of a dozen points in the past week. Air Reduction dipped 2¾ points on one sale. U. S. Gypsum extended its loss for the past two or three sessions to a dozen points. Manville gave up 3 to 99 and then climbed back a little. Pressed Steel Car common and preferred entered new low ground. Ruberoid, another building industry stock that apparently was shoved up in spite of unsatisfactory price conditions in the trade, broke 5 points on one sale to a new low price. Woolworth was soft. Servel gained a point on the higher dividend.

Foreign exchange markets looked phlegmatic. Gold currencies were slightly lower, principally because, according to report, the British control was out of the market. No fresh crisis in the European military situation developed to frighten capital. If the British threats against Italy were taken seriously abroad, apparently they were looked upon as suggesting nothing more than continued British economic future is cloudy enough at best, and for a long time Great Britain has had no great advantage (aside from oil shipments) of trade with Italy.

Earnings.

With the decline in the general market and the bad breaks in numerous individual stocks, as a result of poor earnings statements, news from industrial and commercial centers is now being read with more than usual attention. The investor and the speculator have found that, in a period of uncertainty, earnings are, after all, an important factor in the price of securities.

News over the week-end was favorable on the surface. The spring rise in business has brought most of the index numbers to a new top, and leaving to be answered by the market principally the question of whether stocks have outrun the good business improvement that has taken place. Some people, including many business men, will refuse to take so simple an explanation as that; they will insist rather that the market always is discounting something, and that the current weakness is a warning of a let down in business to come within the next few months—possibly in anticipation of election uncertainties.

Roosevelt.

Most Wall street people now talk as though they believed the chances of re-election of President Roosevelt are better than they were several weeks ago. Success for the New Dealers would certainly be held to be a bear point on the markets, for a while at least; but a section of speculators probably would insist that re-election would let down the barriers to inflation and bring on another spurt in stocks based on that hope or fear.

Meanwhile, the steel industry at least has increased its activity. The operating rate for the industry this week, according to the estimate of the American Iron and Steel Institute, will rise to 70.4 per cent of capacity, the best in several years. Steel trade reviews suggest that part of the gain comes from building inventories by the steel companies, but that in turn suggests business in sight.

Tons of Money.

Our money is at least worth its weight in paper, and that's something. The Treasury is asking bids for paper currency requirements for the fiscal year 1937. It estimates the quantity at 825 tons. The Treasury's notice says "no estimate is made of the requirements for public debt securities."

Earnings.

Corn products published a quarterly earnings statement which explained the recent forward drive of the shares at a time when the general market was weak. The stock market continually illustrates the fact that while some buyers and sellers are well informed on changes in earnings of corporations long before the public gets the news, prices do not always show the results to have been fully discounted. The bad breaks last week in Otis Steel and Johns-Manville, immediately following poor income statements, show that. The insider, in other words, gets the gravy, and some would put him at a still further advantage by making corporation reports more infrequent and less informing.

N. Y. City Bank Affiliate Sued For $1,500,000

Brother-in-Law of C. E. Mitchell Charges Manipulation.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 20.—Charges that an investment affiliate manipulated stock of the National City Bank of New York were made and denied today in the opening statements of a $1,500,000 Federal court damage suit.

The accusations came from Attorney Preston Boyden, representing the estate of the late Joseph E. Rend, wealthy Chicago coal dealer. The suit is directed against the City Co. of New York, identified as an investment affiliate of the big New York bank and successor to the National City Co.

The bill before Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward alleges fraud and deceit, claiming the value of the bank's stock was misrepresented to Rend in telegrams urging him to buy.

Boyden charged that the National City Co. spent $31,000,000, "or practically all of its assets," in attempting to peg the market for the bank's stock after the market crash of October 24, 1929, and by "controlling the market" held the stock "at a ficticious value."

Max D. Steuer, famous New York attorney taking part in the defense, gave a different version of the company's interest in the bank's stock. He set that figure at $32,972,280, saying this much was spent to buy bank stock, but "in contemplation of a merger" of the National City and the Corn Exchange banks. The merger fell through, he said, after the market crash.

Steuer denied that the company's loss in the market ventures was more than $1,497,873.

Charles E. Mitchell, then president of the big bank, was Rend's brother-in-law. Hugh P. Baker, president of the investment concern, was Rend's "close friend," Boyden said.

British Spinners Gain on Japanese

New York, April 20.—One of the striking developments in the cotton spinning industry abroad during the past year has been a substantial expansion of spinning activity in Great Britain accompanying a moderate contraction of such activity in Japan, according to statistics compiled by the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

These developments in the two principal cotton spinning countries outside the United States constitute a reversal of the trends that were very pronounced in previous years.

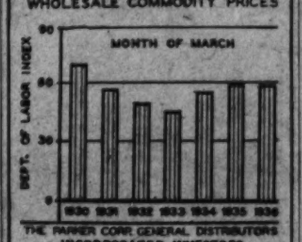
Commodities Rise 32% From Lowest



Boston, Mass., April 20.—The depth of the commodity price deflation was in February, 1933. Since then prices have gained 32 per cent, but during the past year they have just leveled off. Compared with a year ago there have been price increases in fuels, metals and textile products, while farm and food products dropped.

Cotton Irregular, 2 to 9 Points Down

New York, April 20 (AP).—Cotton was irregular but generally lower today under hedging and scattered selling. Prospects for showers in some parts of the southwest and relatively easy Liverpool cables prompted offerings. July contracts, after selling off to 11.10, rallied to 11.15 and closed at 11.12, with the general market closing steady at net declines of 2 to 9 points.

Lumber Shipments 64 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended April 11 stood at 62 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 64 per cent of 1929 shipments. Reported production was slightly above the preceding week, new business and shipments about 7 per cent below, according to reports to the National Lumber Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Revised figures will lessen the decline from the preceding week, which was the highest week but one of the year.

Wheat Slumps Abruptly After Swift Climb

Extreme Loss of 3¼ Cents Is Modified in Late Trading.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 20.—Reacting with stunning celerity today from a recen almost perpendicular rise of about 11 cents a bushel, wheat fell 3¼ cents, but later recovered somewhat. Faced by a pronounced sudden lull both in speculative and commercial demand, wheat prices gave way rapidly after flurried selling started because of unfounded rumors of an inch of rain at one point in Kansas.

Wheat closed nervous, 1½@2¼ cents under Saturday's finish, May 99¾@99½, July 92⅛@92¼, corn ⅝@1⅛ down, May 62⅜@62⅞, oats ⅜@½ off, and provisions showing 5 to 12 cents decline.

Steel Production At Six-Year High

New York, April 20 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute today estimated steel production during the current week at 70.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 67.9 in the preceding week and 53.7 a month ago. A year ago production was at the rate of 44.6 per cent of capacity.

The Institute's figures on weekly production have been available for only about two years, but on the organization's records of output calculated on a monthly basis the estimate for the current week is the highest since May, 1930, which showed 73.68 per cent.

A STREAM OF CREDIT

BUSINESS moves on a stream of credit. When credit is interrupted business suffers. When credit flows in normal volume, merchants can take advantage of buying opportunities, and pass the benefits along to their customers.

Through loans to merchants throughout Washington, the American Security is doing its bit to keep the tide of business flowing. We are glad to make such loans . . . loans that help to improve business conditions in the District.

To Washington merchants and business firms in the market for a line of credit, we say—Come in and discuss your plans with one of our Officers. The American Security will gladly help you, if it can. Good loans are good business for the depositor, the bank, the borrower . . . and the community.

House Indorses 5-Year Boost In Army Planes

4,000 Craft Would Give U. S. 'Minimum for Adequate Defense.'

By the Associated Press.

A boost in Army Air Corps strength, from 1,800 planes to 4,000 planes within the next five years was approved yesterday by the House.

A bill by Representative Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, authorizing the increase came up without advance notice and was snapped through passage and sent to the Senate without a single objection.

The five-year program had the unanimous indorsement of the House Military Committee which contended that 4,000 planes was an absolute minimum for adequate national defense.

Rogers said he was hopeful the Senate would pass the bill before adjournment. He added that if some funds for the planes could be included in the deficiency appropriation bill, a start could be made on the program this year.

Companion Bills Passed.

At the same time the House passed and sent to the Senate two companion bills by Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Military Committee, designed to increase the efficiency of the air force and providing for organization of the Air Reserve Training Corps.

The air reserve bill contemplates training of youths between 17 and 24 in private flying schools under War Department supervision for possible military service. The other measure would change commissioned personnel in the air reserve to balance airplane and pilot requirements and to correct present unsatisfactory temporary ranking of officers.

The military committee in recommending an increase in the Army Air Corps strength argued that many foreign nations have vast air fleets superior to the United States and huge airplane carriers transporting planes capable of long-range operation.

Cites Woodring Testimony.

The committee said the "most convincing evidence of the present deplorable condition of the Army Air Corps" was testimony by Assistant Secretary of War Woodring before a House Appropriations subcommittee.

Woodring testified the Army Air Corps had 1,060 planes on December 2, 1935, of which only 200 were of the most modern type. He said that allowing for washouts and other causes, the Air Corps would have only 777 serviceable planes on July 1 of this year.

"It is the opinion of the committee that further neglect in the development of Army aviation is nothing but false economy," the committee report said, adding that it was reliably informed that foreign nations have from 5,000 to 10,000 planes for military purposes, whereas the United States was nearly ten years behind in development of the Army Air Corps.

Placed Before Roosevelt.

In another national defense move, a recommendation that construction of two new battleships be started was placed formally before President Roosevelt yesterday by Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations and Acting Secretary of the Navy.

"The President didn't say yes and he didn't say no," Standley reported after his conference with the Chief Executive.

Standley said existing naval treaties authorized two new battleships as replacements. He emphasized that Great Britain is building two such vessels.

Mr. Roosevelt said recently he did not expect to ask Congress for funds for battleships at this time.

The admiral estimated about $4,000,000 would be required during the coming year to commence work on the ships which would have a total cost of $40,000,000 to $50,000,000 each.

About four years would be required for completion of two battleships, he said.

Rep. Zioncheck 'May' Answer Speed Charges

Representative Zioncheck (Democrat), of Washington, was not arrested yesterday. He confined his activities to stating that he "may" go to court today to answer the 70-mile-an-hour speeding charge and to denounce J. Edgar Hoover from the House floor as a "dictator and a master of fiction."

Zioncheck has said that Hoover "may know the answer to the Hauptmann murder."

Representative Lehlbach (Republican), of New Jersey, interposed hotly that "everybody knows the answer to the Hauptmann case—Jersey justice."

To this Zioncheck said: "Jersey Justice—what does it give, milk or cream?"

expunged by a vote of 272 to 0 a story placed in the Record on Friday by Zioncheck relative to a real estate deal to which Representative Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, was a party.

"If it's a clear day and I feel like it, I may go to court tomorrow," Zioncheck said when asked whether he would answer the speeding charge.

"I've had $25 worth of publicity and fun out of the case already," he added, "and I may just let it go at that."

Zioncheck exhibited the speeding ticket given him by the police and commented:

"Aren't these cops dumb? Just look at that. They didn't even put the license tag of the car on the ticket."

The Washingtonian explained that after being taken to the Eighth Precinct station he was allowed to return unescorted to Harvard Hall, where he lives, to get $25 collateral.

"I drove 70 miles an hour there and back," he said, "though I guess I slowed down to 60 miles an hour on the curves.

"Then after I had left the police station for the second time, the police thought they had better get my tag number so they called up one of the newspapers for it because they had taken pictures of the car."

and three from Porcupine, Ontario.

"There is good drinking water down here," they told the rescue party, "but there is too much of it."

Apparently exhausted and fearful of dynamite blasts which might send tons of rock crashing down upon them, Dr. Robertson and Scadding repeatedly asked assurances from the miners on the surface to push their efforts to reach them.

The first indication of the condition of the two men came after 9 a. m. when Dr. Robertson reported that he and Scadding could "hold out" at least 12 hours longer.

Another conversation at 2:30 p. m. started with a question sent from below: "Do you expect to get us out today?"

"Yes," the rescuers replied and sent a cherry message below that they expected to effect the release of the prisoners in two hours time.

At approximately 4 p. m. (E. S. T.), Robertson and Scadding notified the surface they could hear the miners breaking through the level where they were entombed.

Some of the rescue party was pessimistic, however, that the release could be made as early as predicted because of varying opinions as to the exact location of the chamber in which Robertson and Scadding are waiting.

The conversations, in which the two imprisoned men used a tiny microphone lowered to their location and replies from the surface were shouted down the pipe through which the wire was strung were difficult, and not entirely satisfactory.

Asked by the surface operators to give up the telephone receiver so food could be sent down to them, the two men asked "is that all you want?"

"We can't get to the pipe," they informed the men on the ground, "ladders are too dangerous."

Their reference to ladders was not explained before the conversation was broken off, although they were believed to have found a position above the 141-foot level.

After the underground diggers reported they were nearly in contact with the entombed men, Mrs. Robertson said:

"They tell me it is only a question of shearing down and making the passageway that they cut perfectly safe. It may be two hours yet. They want to be sure. Isn't it wonderful?"

Talking to Ivey, Robertson pleaded that no blasts be set off for fear of caving in the jagged walls of the old mine, recently purchased by Robertson and Magill.

Robertson said to tell his wife "we are both fine," and then engaged in a rambling conversation. He was anxious to relate "how we got into this mess."

There was a sudden gust of air, he said, and then "the whole roof fell in."

He talked of other things. But he and his companion refused to go to the tube where they were fed yesterday with soup and brandy.

"It's too hard to walk," Robertson muttered into the microphone.

Action Delayed On District Bill For a Stadium

House Sub-committee Puts Off Report on Measure by Mrs. Norton.

A sub-committee of the House District Committee yesterday postponed action on the Norton bill to authorize construction of a stadium and sports center in Anacostia Park at the foot of East Capitol street.

A picture of a sports center that might conceivably attract future Olympic contests or championship prize fights was drawn by witnesses who urged a favorable report.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, said detailed plans for the project have been drafted and estimated the ultimate cost at between $18,000,000 and $20,000,000.

Besides a stadium, the bill authorizes construction of a swimming pool, a parade and athletic field, and other recreational facilities.

The stadium, according to Finnan, would be as large as Soldiers' Field at Chicago and have a seating capacity of between 90,000 and 100,000. The parade grounds, he said, already are being graded as a PWA project.

Settle admitted, however, that the bill has been disapproved by the Budget Bureau on the ground it is not in accord with the President's financial program.

Speaking for the District Commissioners, Leo Fee, assistant corporation counsel, said the District will not oppose the project so long as it it financed by the Federal Government.
